Preface

pg. 11

Chapter 1: 9-11 Living In The Matrix

February 15, 2007

pg. 13

Understanding the full truth about 9/11 requires two stages of an intellectual process. The first step - Realizing the fraudulence of the "official 9/11 story" which requires study and logic. The second step - Facing the implications of this knowledge, and the truth about our politics, economic system, indeed our own capacity for independent critical thought, is by far the more difficult part of this journey.

Chapter 2: Chaos In The New World Order

March 20, 2007

pg. 21

We need not guess at the globalists plans - they tell us directly what they intend for us in their New World Order. Our number one weapon in this new age is our understanding of the forces set to control us, and an effective response from people willing to assert their independence and freedom - there was once a great country built on such ideals.

Chapter 3: They Must Be Lying – I Saw It On TV

pg. 30

This gigantic contrivance that could so easily promulgate these lies was now revealed to me, and deserved my faith in their impartiality and honesty for the last time. I had depended on them for more than 40 years of my life, and it turns out they are quite willing to not only lie to everyone, but even more important - I realized that there are so many things they are willing to not tell us at all.

Chapter 4: Life in the New World Order – Soul Mates or Cell Mates?

pg. 46

Our lives are being directed according to a business plan. The agenda has been laid out over decades and centuries, we are just led to believe it's happening in real-time. Even more incredible, you can literally go back hundreds of years to find out it's the same basic cast of characters through elite bloodlines responsible for secret societies and shadow governments.

Chapter 5: 911 Truth - You, Me and the SPP

August 7, 2007

pg. 59

Deals such as the Security and Prosperity Partnership agreement should be null and void by the very nature of their incarnation, put forth by unelected officials, totally against the will of virtually all the citizenry, and only in the best interests of a select few.

Chapter 6: 3 Fish, A Pizza Joint & Building 7

pg. 70

How are we going to fight this New World Order which is steaming ahead with plans for global domination and human enslavement? The power of one is the force that will ultimately win this battle. All great advancements throughout history are inevitably because of a few individuals and their unique sense of genius.

Chapter 7: 9/11 and Rubik's Cube

August 30, 2007

pg. 75

If we truly aspire to cultivate a sense of understanding and compassion within our lives - we cannot allow the current suffering and injustice to be inflicted on our fellow human beings. Moreover, if we continue to be so callously indifferent and morally bereft - these same aberrations of humanity will surely come to destroy our lives directly - as to our souls we may already be far too late.

Chapter 8: William Rodriguez and the Key to 9/11

September 22, 2007

pg. 80

I believe William Rodriguez when he describes the bombs going off before the planes hit - I don't know why he would make that up, being the kind of person who would continually risk his life to save complete strangers. I suppose he still holds the key to 9/11, both literally and figuratively. On that day he used it to help save people's lives, and today we can use his testimony to help unlock the truth about what happened - or more succinctly, what didn't happen.

Chapter 9: Ground Zero Logic

October 4, 2007

pg. 87

We have so much proof that 9/11 Was An Inside Job. This photo essay combines some very famous pictures taken from the scene at the World Trade Center disaster. The facts about 9/11 and the immutable physical laws of nature will not be altered - only your capacity for critical thought.

Chapter 10: Naomi or Noam am I

pg. 93

I went to see Naomi Klein a few nights ago here in Victoria BC Canada. She was finishing up a book tour for her recently released "The Shock Doctrine: The Rise of Disaster Capitalism" before heading abroad for the next stage of her promotional tour. In this excellent book Klein exposes how catastrophic events become extremely profitable for corporations while enabling governments to further an agenda of "disaster capitalism". She took a few questions afterwards and it was then I found myself questioning some of her views.

Chapter 11: 9/11 And Other Optical Illusions

October 23, 2007

pg. 97

There's a wonderful optical illusion which involves a graphic of a ballerina spinning around on one leg. This illusion elucidates a very important principle concerning subjective reality, and helps to illustrate a point about the vastly differing views people can hold about events such as 9/11.

Chapter 12: Mental Blocks And 9/11: Analogize This

November 13, 2007

pg. 105

When you can determine the point of incongruity in an argument, it is analogous to finding a tiny pebble - which, if placed correctly, will enable one man to move a mountain - or one idea to change the world. Knowing exactly where to place the pebble, or finding the point of balance where the weight of an argument will determine the direction of thought, we can affect change with only the slightest use of force in relation to the magnitude of the problem.

Chapter 13: Turns Out My Dog Is A Terrorist Too

pg. 112

Came home from work yesterday and found my dog taking a dump and getting sick all over last week's newspaper - the front page no less, which contained a picture of the Congress about to pass another one of the leader's great new laws - this one makes it illegal for anybody to wrap a towel around their head after getting out of the shower.

Chapter 14: New World Disorder: Patterns Of Psychopathy And Other Fractal Anomalies

December 15, 2007

pg. 115

Our entire culture is one big pattern, carefully created and manipulated according to a plan. For this plan to work we must all be quantifiable, predictable, and generally hypnotized into complacency. The patterns ingrained deep within us tell us there is only one way to be victorious in this world, and that is to fight our enemies and be better than everyone else. Instead of inculcating our young psyches with relativistic notions of who is best, we might try cultivating a mindset that seeks true understanding through awareness.

About the Author

pg. 131

Preface

In January 2007 there was an awakening in my life. Having just discovered the truth about 9/11, an internal struggle had to be reconciled. How does a moral, rational individual deal with the harsh realities concerning our world, and what can they do to expose the truth and realize justice for the victims, as well as the many lives taken in the subsequent wars of hegemonic aggression?

Feeling rather conflicted, I struggled to express my feelings as a purely cathartic exercise in an essay called, "9/11 Living In The Matrix". This work was quickly disseminated on the Internet and I received hundreds of emails from around the world – it seems as though my first awareness piece struck a chord with lots of people everywhere. Many of those gracious individuals also expressed a desire to read more of my work – truth is, I never wrote anything before this essay, and had no intention to continue after.

This situation would change however, as it became necessary to not only expose the fraudulence of the official story – but also to place this tragedy within some kind of larger contextual framework.

As I have continued to write I've found a home for my articles on many a portal in cyberspace. My personal discovery regarding these societal issues, and my thoughts on how every individual can come to terms with these conditions within their own lives, are tied together by a common thread found within these chronologically presented essays.

9 - 11 Living In the Matrix

"During times of universal deceit, telling the truth becomes a revolutionary act." - George Orwell

Have you seen the movie, "The Matrix"? A computer hacker learns from mysterious rebels about the true nature of his reality, and his role in the war against the controllers of it.

What is the true nature of our reality? Of course everyone's definition is going to be different, but reality and facts are not really subjective, only interpretations. Two months ago, my reality was diametrically opposite to what it is now. I believed what I was told, what the media reported, what I thought I saw happening on 9-11. Now, when I express my opinion, I'm ridiculed, scorned, and labeled as a crackpot. My interpretation of the facts may be different from two months ago, but the reality of events on 9-11 have remained exactly the same as on the day they occurred. I was simply too ignorant of the facts to realize that what I was told by those that I trusted, was a complete lie.

We are all together, and all alike. My evolution of thought is much the same as the next person's. When I first heard about the 9-11 truth movement, I shrugged it off and said, "that's crazy, you're paranoid and delusional", or "there are always going to be some crazy conspiracy theories". Thank goodness my friend persisted and weeks later mentioned it again. This time, I opted to honour his integrity and respect his intelligence enough to take some time and do some research.

After five years of believing in something as fact, and having no other information to the contrary - it took me just one hour to see the real truth about this issue. There was an epiphany; a huge light went on inside my head, and suddenly so many things finally made sense about this tragedy. Especially the subsequent events dependent upon it, for 9-11 truly is the lynch-pin for the justification of so many atrocities perpetrated by its architects.

Heuristic logic and basic cognitive reasoning depend on elemental constructs of accepted thought and a fundamental understanding of physical laws, which can't be abrogated by such buffoonery as perpetrated by the US government. The buildings obviously came down because they were deliberately imploded, most notably the third one, which wasn't even hit by a plane. (David Copperfield would pay big bucks for that trick!) Why is it obvious? Let's look at this localized event of a plane crashing into the higher floors of such a tall building. One simply cannot rationalize how each floor underneath suddenly explodes into dust, loses all structural integrity, and allows a point in time/space at the top of the structure to fall down to earth at free-fall speeds, just as if there was only air to impede its descent. All those intervening floors suddenly decide to synchronously disintegrate into a total global collapse, and offer no resistance. Reason alone should dictate that those structures could only come down in this fashion by demolition. There simply is no other way to get a building to collapse like that, other than controlled demolition. Now, this point is really the key, like the first micro-second of the Big Bang Theory, so much is riding on this 9-11 catastrophe: the fake war on terror, the war against Afghanistan, the war in Iraq (Enough with the freedom and democracy already, you guys are killing me).

It makes sense, even to a non-engineer like myself, that if we are to believe the official "fire" theory, we would be forced to imagine that the steel be required to weaken under severe, and very long-lasting exposure to a heat source of incredible magnitude, to effect the entire steel frame, with all its heat dissipating potential over such a voluminous area of metal. That steel would get so extremely hot, that it would bend, buckle and sway in a non-symmetrical fashion. Instead, it broke into distinct sections - along with everything else being pulverized -and fell straight down into its own footprint. Add to this the many documented eye-witness testimonies of massive explosions occurring in the substructures and other floors, which could only account for the rivers and pools of molten metal found weeks after the event. This can be reasoned as follows:

Steel melts at X degrees. Fossil fuel fires, such as kerosene jet-fuel, can only obtain maximum temperatures of far less than X in these conditions over this elapsed time period. The fact of the matter is, stated temperature is far too cool to cause evaporation and melting of steel - unless we are to believe that a one-hundred and ten story building could crash down onto some steel, and heat it up to thousands of degrees only by the dynamic of friction alone. Let's think about this - let's try and drop a few steel beams off a tall building, and see if they turn into a molten state after hitting other steel on the ground. Is that what they'd have us believe? I dare say, next time someone tries to tell you a story about how Osama bin Whatsit and a bunch of nimrods with box cutters are to blame, ask them how we end up with molten steel - Tell me the process. While you're at it, ask how the hell did they get a forty-seven story building to fall down beside the ones that were hit by the airplanes? How did the steel in building Seven become so incredibly weakened, as to cause a total, global, synchronously beautiful, he said he was goona pull it, can't you all see that it was a controlled demolition collapse?

So, along our journey we must proceed.

Simply by using our Einstein-like thought experiments, along with physical evidence and eye-witness testimonies, and sometimes relying on critical thinking alone, we can say with utter certainty that these buildings were imploded. We can't rely on examination of ALL the physical evidence, most of which was whisked away by the authorities too quickly, a fact that tends to incriminate them. They can spend years reconstructing a plane crash to try and figure out forensically what happened, but not the US government on 9-11. No way. Not after the biggest, most diabolical, horrendous event of the new century. Just hours after the attacks we had pictures of the guys who did it, and a myth about a guy in a cave who masterminded this grandiose scheme to outwit the entire defense system of the biggest super-power on earth. No black boxes or video tapes released, gag orders issued, destruction and suppression of evidence, manipulation of media, etc. etc. etc.

Would it not seem reasonable to want to explore all potential eventualities and probable causes before coming to a hasty decision regarding the biggest mass-murder in history? Would one not at least consider a demolition theory, instead of sticking with a "official conspiracy theory" that required physical laws of nature to behave like in some bizzaro world. But no - because as soon as we admit that there were explosives, then we MUST admit that it was an inside job - ergo there must be collusion at the highest levels - case closed.

The entire government theory hinges upon there not being any controlled demolition. Unfortunately, anyone who looks at the evidence in an honest, scientific manner could hardly deny it. But still, they must adhere to this ridiculous explanation, and conveniently, anybody who questions it must be a terrorist, or somebody who supports terrorism, and on and on. Yes, my dear people of the United States and the World, it was definitely done by the very ones who have suppressed all the evidence and insisted on this impossible story. Ergo, there is no real war on terror as such, except for the one that the US government is inflicting upon us all. It's a hoax, a sham, and too many people on this planet are either uninformed, misinformed, or just plain dis-informed. Let's talk about Jaylo's new hair style, or Janet Jackson's wardrobe malfunction, or any other such inane drivel that those corporate slaves who call themselves journalists serve up on the idiot box every night.

"Our greatest difficulty at the moment is that our media is totally corrupted – starting with the New York Times - the media belongs to our rulers."

"In the old days when something ghastly went wrong you could count on journalists writing something about it....there are no voices expressing disagreement, " Gore Vidal

I'm ashamed that I spent five years not even questioning 9-11 But once apprised of a few facts, and taking into account the totally shameful behaviour of the media, and the egregious actions of the US government to cover-up and obfuscate the truth, I realize I shouldn't be too hard on myself, or others who also must alter their mental paradigms about our world, no matter how comfortably they fit. We all must shudder at the thought that those entrusted to lead and protect us, could be so twisted as to commit such acts. It's time to wake up and do the right thing. All of us. We must get those psychopaths out of office, and don't bother with the other party, that's just part of the scam, in case you haven't figured it out. Take those trillions of dollars spent on killing people, and put it towards solar power, wind power, or any other kind of power that doesn't destroy our once-beautiful planet, or motivate a part of our society to become so dehumanized, that they could commit such heinous acts, all for profit and control.

The US government is leading its nation down a path to ruin. History does not look kindly towards tyrants who spread terror and perpetrate wars like the Bush administration. I was truly disgusted when it was demonstrated to me how the United States government has sanctioned the dumping of depleted uranium in some of the ammunition used on Iraq. Scores of babies born disfigured, both Iraqi and American, are a grim testament to this horrific practice. Bad enough that they kill and maim them, but to add insult to injury, do they really need to torture them, as well as subject future generations to such a ghastly existence? And why? Oh, right. Halliburton up five points.

I just don't understand how any American can feel good about watching football, going bowling, waving their flags, when their government is committing such atrocities in the so-called name of freedom and democracy. I grieve for the families of those victims in New York; the families of those Afghans who were just innocently trying to struggle through their lives; the allied soldiers dying in Iraq and their families trying to rationalize why; and the countless thousands of Iraqis who are still being killed, dragged out of their homes and called terrorists, while their wives and children are forced to witness such nightmares. If you are truly cognitive of what has happened, and what is still happening, then there's just no way you can sit around the table with your big fat turkeys, raising a glass and singing, "God Bless America". I must agree with Howard Zinn, "Why not, God bless everyone?".

And all of it predicated on the lie of 9-11.

We are inexorably a part of that lie by continuing our denial of its existence, and that makes us all a party to everything that has been happening as a result. It is incumbent upon the "US" and the rest of "us" to prove what really happened that fateful day. Let's go to court. We've got the likes of Griffin, Ryan, Jones, and countless others who have the expertise and moral integrity on our team. We've got science. We've got the truth. What have they got? A bullshit story any eighth grade science student could refute, and a bunch of experts who don't seem to mind going down in the annals of history as being dreadfully incompetent, however loyal, and completely unwilling to even debate their so-called findings, therefore, a bunch of analysts.

And so the fascists are now getting the detention centers ready- those are for you "doubting" Americans you know - because the huge stinking pile of horse manure known as 9-11 isn't going to go away, rather it will just keep getting worse. Like a flood that starts from a few small drops, understanding of the truth will continue to grow and gain strength. They can't hide from truth. Truth is not spin, or what they tell their bootlicking media to cover. Truth doesn't care if they think they can keep on repeating the same lies, over and over, until the world has heard them enough times to believe them.

"First they came for the communists, and I did not speak out-- because I was not a communist; Then they came for the socialists, and I did not speak out - because I was not a socialist; Then they came for the trade unionists, and I did not speak out - because I was not a trade unionist; Then they came for the Jews, and I did not speak out - because I was not a Jew; Then they came for me - and there was no one left to speak out for me." - Pastor Martin Niemöller 1945

"All truth passes through three stages. First, it is ridiculed. Second, it is violently opposed. Third, it is accepted as being self-evident"- Arthur Schopenhauer

Don't be afraid of telling the truth regarding 9-11. Tell everybody you can - shout it out. Let them call you names, let them ridicule. We truly are very much alike, and just as I scorned the first person who told me while I still lived under the yoke of my own ignorance, you will plant the first seeds of doubt and inquiry within others. Over time, this crazy idea will move through its natural evolution into becoming accepted thought.

The operative question being whether we collectively let too much time elapse before those murderous tyrants plunge us further toward apocalyptic extinction.

What are you going to do about 9-11?

"There are none so enslaved as those who falsely believe they are free" – Goethe

Chaos In The New World Order

Chaos En Novus Ordo Seclorum

"Make me one with everything" - Buddhist in a pizza parlour

Unification of Europe was first - now the North American Union is in full swing - replete with fuzzy, double-speak, feel good names like Harmonization, Deep Integration, Free Trade, Security and Prosperity Partnership Agreement, etc. These measures, based on negating geopolitical boundaries and securing monopolistic markets, will ultimately lead to the clash of cultures, as has already begun. Of course the elite will have a solution for the Hegelian problem they created, namely, a new world order – with themselves as puppet masters pulling our strings.

"For more than a century ideological extremists at either end of the political spectrum have seized upon well-publicized incidents such as my encounter with Castro to attack the Rockefeller family for the inordinate influence they claim we wield over American political and economic institutions. Some even believe we are part of a secret cabal working against the best interests of the United States, characterizing my family and me as "internationalists" and of conspiring with others around the world to build a more integrated global political and economic structure - one world, if you will. If that's the charge, I stand guilty, and I am proud of it." - David Rockefeller 2002 autobiography Memoirs

There is a small, but powerful group of individuals who are the architects and instigators behind the formation and implementation of the New World Order. Their plans represent a consciously organized attempt to bring about an end to national sovereignty and western democracy.

"David Rockefeller is the most conspicuous representative today of the ruling class, a multinational fraternity of men who shape the global economy and manage the flow of its capital. Rockefeller was born to it, and he has made the most of it. But what some critics see as a vast international conspiracy, he considers a circumstance of life and just another day's work... In the world of David Rockefeller it's hard to tell where business ends and politics begins" - Bill Moyers

Their motivations are the age old human traits of greed and power – their instruments of control include the monopolization of corporate interests and banking, influence of political power, enforcement of laws utilizing a ruthless and centralized military, the manipulation of opinion engendered through academic circles, and the control of mainstream media which provides the necessary propaganda tool to shape public consciousness.

"We are grateful to the Washington Post, the New York Times, Time magazine and other great publications whose directors have attended our meetings and respected the promises of discretion for almost forty years. It would have been impossible for us to develop our plan for the world if we had been subject to the bright lights of publicity during those years. But, the world is now more sophisticated and prepared to march towards a world - government. The supranational sovereignty of an intellectual elite and world bankers is surely preferable to the National autodetermination practiced in past centuries" -

David Rockefeller - address to a Trilateral Commission

North America is being transformed from three distinct countries - Canada, USA and Mexico, into a single economic entity called the North American Union. The creation of this new state is being implemented by stealth, virtually without opposition, and in front of an unwitting population.

"The unaware are unaware that they are unaware" - Bo Britz

The method of enforcement for the North American Union is a police state. Under the guise of keeping us all safe with anti-terrorist laws, citizens will lose their civil liberties preventing any dissent against Big Brother.

"Terrorism is the best political weapon for nothing drives people harder than a fear of sudden death." - Adolf Hitler

"There ought to be limits to freedom" - GW Bush

Learning the truth about 9/11, and its integral part in the formation of the new world order, helps us to understand the concepts and objectives of the globalists. Just as this event has been used to justify such horrific acts of aggression and suppression of freedoms, we can use it to expose those who are truly responsible, and start to heal the deep wounds afflicted by such aberrations of humanity.

The ruling elite do not care about human rights, or true democracy, indeed, these values stand in the way of achieving their goals. For the current cabal, the end justifies the means, as vividly demonstrated by the events of 9/11, Afghanistan and Iraq, just to name the most obvious. Their objectives must be implemented with the use of corruption and deceit, simply because nobody would willingly vote for the kind of world they are trying to build.

"We are on the verge of a global transformation. All we need is the right major crisis and the nations will accept the New World Order." - David Rockefeller

I remember going to the annual exhibition in Toronto as a kid. Inside a tent this magician was waving handkerchiefs over a girl who appeared to be suspended in mid air in front of him. Because I knew that humans could not just float above the ground, I was intrigued and determined to get as close as possible, and really look at what they were doing. Sure enough, the loose drapery hanging off the table at the back concealed, upon closer scrutiny, a protruding steel bar which held up the woman. I couldn't help but think-as I stepped once again to the back of the tent, a throng of people now in front of me-this is actually a really good trick, as long as you don't look too close or think too hard.

That's how I feel about 9-11. Nice try, fellas. You gave us a good dog & pony show-lots of fireworks; a quick and ready story filled with a cast of radical Muslim villains, all prepackaged for us to hate; and this guy with a beard in a cave, who can play evil mind-tricks from across the ocean-but the jig is up. And please don't think I'm being flippant or disrespectful to the many lives that have been so tragically taken through this horrendous act and all its subsequent horrors.

"The lie can be maintained only for such time as the State can shield the people from the political, economic and/or military consequences of the lie. It thus becomes vitally important for the State to use all of its powers to repress dissent, for the truth is the mortal enemy of the lie, and thus by extension, the TRUTH becomes the greatest ENEMY OF THE STATE." - Dr. Joseph M. Goebbels

Once we expose the fraudulence of 9/11, the entire globalist agenda will tumble like a house of cards, or in this case, a "twin tower". Understanding this event within its greater context, we can pull the lynch-pin on the plans for the North American Union, and generate some much needed chaos in the new world order.

"Three things cannot long be hidden-the sun, the moon, and the truth" – Confucius

Look up and down the streets where you live. The vast majority of people in this country, and around the world, are just honest, hard working individuals who want to build a life for themselves, raise their families and enjoy their customs.

"There's no way to rule innocent men. The only power any government has is the power to crack down on criminals. Well, when there aren't enough criminals, one "makes" them. One declares so many things to be a crime that it becomes impossible for men to live without breaking laws. Who wants a nation of law-abiding citizens? What's there in that for anyone? But just pass the kind of laws that can neither be observed nor enforced nor objectively interpreted - and you create a nation of law-breakers-and then you cash in on the guilt." - Ayn Rand, "Atlas Shrugged"

Although most people are not conscious of the subtle and the not-so-subtle mechanisms of social conditioning we are bombarded with on a daily basis, rest assured the elite in charge have an agenda, a timetable, and the means with which to execute their objectives.

"A nation of sheep will beget a government of wolves" - Edward R. Murrow

Here are just some of the documented features and objectives of the North American Union:

- Development of a common security perimeter by 2010
- Implementation of a North American Border Pass with biometric identifiers
- Unification of the border and expanded US controlled customs facilities
- A single economic space that shares a common external tariff
- A North American currency replacing the dollar and the peso that will be called the amero
- Seamless movement of goods within North America
- Labour mobility between Canada and the U.S.
- A North American energy strategy as a regional alternative to Kyoto
- A North American regulatory plan that includes "open skies and open roads"
- A unified approach on food, health, and the environment
- A permanent tribunal for trade and investment disputes
- An annual North American summit meeting
- Scholarships to Centers for North American Studies
- The NAFTA superhighway, a north-south interstate trade corridor linking Mexico, Canada and the U.S. The NAFTA superhighway will bypass U.S. entryways and allow global conglomerates to capitalize by exploiting cheap labour, bypassing local union considerations, and exposing the entire continent to potential security risks.

NAFTA , SPP, GATT, WTO and other trade agreements are the means by which the globalist political regime have expanded into North America. Different from the IMF, which can wield its power through financial dispensations to third world countries, these trade agreements supersede local regulatory powers, and through the force of national law, ensure that transnational interests are in a sense codified into each constitutional framework.

Opponents to the NAU include progressives in all three countries who believe the union would be detrimental to the average citizen. Chief among their many concerns is the loss of sovereignty and democracy, the relinquishment of authority to unelected corporations with privately contracted law enforcement, and the displacement of a workforce due to an influx of immigrants.

So what can we do? Many things. We have incredible power in our numbers and in our potential economic influence. The system would collapse without our cooperation. What we lack is the solidarity of purpose, and organization of our huge numbers.

"A nation of well-informed men, who have been taught to know and prize the rights that God has given them cannot be enslaved. It is in the region of ignorance that tyranny begins!"

- Benjamin Franklin

We are living in a critical time of change, our number one weapon in this new age is our understanding of the forces set to control us, and an effective response in great numbers from people willing to assert their independence and freedom - there was once a great country built on such ideals.

"Suddenly the whole world is not enough punishment for the wicked, nor reward for the good" - Taoist saying

We live within a duality of perception every moment. Within rages the battle of desire and reality, while on the outside, the ancient struggle between those who would work for the benefit of society, through peace, and those forces set upon exploiting others for profit and control, through destruction. Alone, we have the responsibility to assert our complete sovereignty first as individuals, and by extension of ourselves, to the greater group of which we are all a part.

Unification does not have to mean deceit and tyranny. National identities and human rights can be maintained while we come together on many things that might benefit us all. Just as we must accept the inner conflicts that cause us to adjust our desires, and with the right choices lead to a reinvention of ourselves in order to adapt, we also must recognize and challenge those external forces that would promote marginalization and exclusion of others, and create struggles that would constrain us in our inevitable choice between good and evil, and ultimately our ability to survive.

A native American grandfather was talking to his grandson about how he felt. He said 'I feel as if I have two wolves fighting in my heart. One wolf is the vengeful, angry, violent one. The other wolf is the loving, compassionate one.' The grandson asked him, 'Which wolf will win the fight in your heart?' The grandfather answered: 'The one I feed.'
- Native American Story

On the grand chessboard of the power elite in this world, we may only represent insignificant entities, insofar as we are concerned as individuals. However, when considered as a group, we can have considerable influence. Our strength in numbers only serves our cause to the detriment when we blindly live our lives as revenue generating hunks of flesh that serve as an economic engine for the ruling class - it is our ignorance that works against us. When we are illuminated with the light of truth and understanding, we can then use that power to influence the course of events and make the big machine grind to a halt, or at least cause a few gold hubcaps to fly off. All this can be accomplished through non-violent means, lest we sink to the level of our enemies, in which case we risk becoming that which we oppose.

"Because we are part of one existence, whomsoever you are hurting, you are hurting yourself in the long run. Today you may not realize it, but one day when you become more aware; then you will say, 'My God! This wound was inflicted by me -- upon myself.' You had hurt somebody else thinking that people are different. Nobody is different. This whole existence is one, cosmic unity. Out of this understanding comes non-violence." - Osho

There is room for everyone in this world. My beliefs tell me that every human dynamic resolves from its highest intellectual level down to understanding and compassion. I know in my heart that we could be caring enough to engender a consciousness where there is consideration for all people on this earth. And I know if we use our heads, we could be creative and resourceful enough to find a way to do it while abolishing the act of war itself.

That would be my New World Order.

They Must be Lying - I saw it on TV

"Most people prefer to believe that their leaders are just and fair, even in the face of evidence to the contrary, because once a citizen acknowledges that the government under which he lives is lying and corrupt, the citizen has to choose what he or she will do about it. To take action in the face of corrupt government entails risks of harm to life and loved ones. To choose to do nothing is to surrender one's self-image of standing for principles. Most people do not have the courage to face that choice. Hence, most propaganda is not designed to fool the critical thinker but only to give moral cowards an excuse not to think at all." - Michael Rivero

Frozen Moments at the Altar of Truth

It all started for me in 1959 when I was born, I mean the way I've been lied to through mainstream media. One of my earliest memories was sitting in front of the TV with my family after JFK was assassinated. My mother and grandmother weeping uncontrollably, my father and grandfather - avowing that this was a "good man" and it's "always the best who get taken so young". I had no idea what was going on, being just four and a half years old - but that moment solidified like crystal in my mind - my first big "frozen moment".

A few short years later we were all sitting there again in front of the TV at 3am watching Neil Armstrong set foot on the moon, uttering those prophetic words. I'll never forget the neighbour beside us, this old Italian guy who was saying that the entire lunar mission had to be a hoax, we were a bunch of suckers for believing it, it couldn't be true.

Everybody I knew thought he was nuts, myself included. I was busy having my head filled with such grand thoughts about the nobility and goodness of mankind, and like my family and almost all my neighbours, I was once again willing to believe in my heart that whatever these icons of the public trust on TV told us was the absolute truth - after all, these were the same folks who gave us the news every night, every single evening around the dinner hour, so we could find out what's happening in the world, what to think about, how to judge those people over there, over here, anywhere. I'll never forget how proud I was watching man walk on the moon, my 10 year old heart bursting out of my chest, feeling so lucky to be alive at that time and watching it on TV. This was a huge "frozen moment".

There are other mental snapshots which of course remain quite vivid in my mind. Robert Kennedy & Martin Luther King assassinations, the war in Vietnam that spanned my entire childhood, the Nixon Watergate hearings, Iran Contra. It could not enter our mind that anything we saw on television could be any less than the gospel truth, because we live in the Western hemisphere, the best, most noble hemisphere on this planet. Just ask Walter Cronkite, or Dan Rather, or Ronald McDonald, or Barney the Friggin' Dinosaur - any talking head that props up in a medium shot while occupying the standard 4 by 3 aspect ratio, mind-inhibiting confines of this ribald human invention. They must be telling the truth - gotta be real, after all, "I saw it on TV".

Jump to Sept. 11th 2001.

I'm sitting in my office when a news bulletin flashes on my computer screen and I'm alerted to the 9/11 attack in NYC. As if by some secret homing mechanism, my workmates also wander outside of their respective cells and converge in the communal coffee area - and so it starts, we immediately begin parroting the official myth fed to us by the news media about this event. Talk is about Osama and the crazed 19 Muslim hijackers. Ooh boy, those rag-heads are goona get theirs, those bastards are sure to pay - I hope Uncle Sam really nukes them back to the stone age for what they've done, and on and on we chattered for days and weeks, all the while being spun and manipulated as always. The biggest "frozen moment" of my life so far.

I'll never forget that day and the horror of watching those planes hit the towers, or the people falling to their tragic deaths, and like the other "shock and awe" moments, I can literally close my eyes and transport myself to that situation, just like I was there at that very moment. And when I remember, the images and ideas as portrayed to me by my lifelong companion the television are there in my mind, with the pictures, movies, sounds - Nay, it isn't really there with me - it IS me. I'm nothing more, at those times in my life, than a biological download mechanism that will barf up all the crud it's been fed by the societal teat from which I'd been trained to suckle on for all my ideas and opinions since birth.

And so another 5 years will elapse, almost every single day - let's catch some news and see what's happening, let's tune in before bed and follow that story, let's wrap our life around this version of reality, which is hardly any reality at all. But I still didn't know that, not until 5 full years after 9/11.

"Doubt is the vestibule which we all must pass through before we can enter the temple of truth" - osho

Awakening

Thank you 9/11.

Once I saw the truth about this event my life changed forever, and ultimately for the better. It didn't happen all at once, nor was it easy or very pleasant at all, this process demands so much of you, and unless you are the kind of person capable of a paradigm shift you won't get there. Doesn't matter how smart, how much money, how high you can jump - not everyone is able to look objectively at their social conditioning, step outside of themselves and honestly analyze their programming, fiddle with the knobs and make an adjustment. I remember this "moment" as the biggest, most life changing of all - that exact instant when I "got it", and it wasn't just the getting of 9/11 that was realized at that pivotal moment. It was so much more, for I knew in that nanosecond that I had apprehended a truth - I could now define a mechanism of which media was only but an important part. This gigantic contrivance that could so easily promulgate these lies was now revealed to me, and deserved my faith in their impartiality and honesty for the last time. I had depended on them for more than 40 years of my life, and it turns out they are quite willing to not only lie to everyone, but even more important - I realized that there are so many things they are willing to not tell us at all.

"We won't get fooled again" - the Who

That moment of illumination occurred while I was listening to a lecture by Dr. David Ray Griffin, he was explaining why the official account of 9/11 could not be true - the logic irrefutable, the proofs incontrovertible, the evidence overwhelming, but what struck me most was the grace and dignity of this man, able to manifest such a positive aspect in the revealing of truth, all the while dealing face to face with such an ugly, disgusting reality. Probably the last "frozen moment" I will ever experience.

"You cannot teach a man anything; you can only help him find it within himself." - Galileo Galilei

And so I sat atop this long slope looking straight back down at my life which ascended upward like one side of a pyramid, the slant provided to me by my once trusted patriarchal friend the media, it was time to say goodbye. My existence was different from that moment on, and so was my relationship with the world, like when you find out that your best friend has been sleeping with your girlfriend for the last 2 years and everybody's been lying about it to your face. I vowed to myself at that very moment that I would refuse to accept any more lies in my life, and I would take responsibility for my own opinions. I made a promise to no longer listen to BS without calling to account those responsible for the lies and hypocrisy. At the very least we should stand for something worthwhile in our lives, like truth.

It was too convenient to settle on the official explanations for 9-11 at the time, and I forgive myself, and you too if you still believe them. It would simply be unreasonable for me to be at odds with anyone just because they occupied a temporal reality where I once stood.

"I have yet to meet an ignorant man whose roots are not embedded in my soul" - Kahlil Gibran

If somebody came to me a year before I was open to the truth, I would have probably got angry and turned them aside. The best we can hope for is to present people with anomalies regarding the official narrative, and let each person face the myriad incongruities and come to their own conclusions. You see, some people figured it out right away, but finding out the truth is not any indication of how intelligent you are - that judgement comes later. It took me 5 years, not because I couldn't understand it, but rather because I was unaware of it, and didn't even consider that what I was told was false.

"All truths are easy to understand once they are discovered; the point is to discover them."

- Galileo Galilei

It's the classic difference between ignorance and stupidity - I was ignorant, I became aware of the facts, no more ignorance. A stupid person, however, continues to believe something even after receiving lots of information to the contrary. If you don't know the truth about 9/11 you must educate yourself, if you do know the truth then you are compelled to educate others. Looking back is not easy, neither is facing the real truth about the situation now. I disagree with those who say, never mind 9-11, let's deal with the war, or the environment - there are all these other problems now - that was 6 years ago. WRONG - BIG X on that one. It is my firm belief that if we are unable to approach the biggest examples of deceit and injustice so prevalent at this very moment, it behooves us to examine that which is really important in our lives, not to mention any concerns of social conscience or morality. I'm so sick of hearing about the "war on terror", about "al Qaeda", etc. So much suffering and injustice has resulted from the continued insistence on this mythology - predicated on the lie of 9/11.

"You cannot win a War on Terrorism. It's like having a war on jealousy" - David Cross

"The World is not dangerous because of those who do harm but because of those who look at it without doing anything." - Albert Einstein

This issue calls everyone to account, you have to make a decision, and its not a happy conclusion to arrive at, so many prefer to remain comfortable within the lie - the problem being, there are many fellow human beings on this planet who are getting killed every day, right now as a matter of fact. Each day this continues we must ask ourselves how and if our actions, or non actions, are contributing to this injustice. It sickens me, I hate this situation - I didn't create it yet I must face this moral dilemma - if I don't speak out against it and do everything within my power to change it, then I must admit I'm part of the problem that allows it to continue. I don't want my great great grandchildren to look back and say, "Why did the people of WWII Germany and 21st century America allow Hitler and Bush to gain so much power and commit such atrocities?" "Gee, I don't know, Fleeble-Bop Four of Seven, I guess those people were just spineless sheep".

"He who allows oppression, shares the crime." - Erasmus Darwin, grandfather of Charles Darwin

"Noncooperation with evil is as much a duty as cooperation with good." - Gandhi

When I was young I used to enjoy watching those old WWII movies, and I'm sure that like most people, along with pretending I was one of the valiant heroes being portrayed, I wondered how folks in Germany could allow Hitler and his Nazis to gain such power in that country. Now I understand, many of the German people were as much victims as all of us at this moment, unable to voice their opinions without being ridiculed and attacked, rights and freedoms taken away by a fascist state, having to bear the ignominy of witnessing your government commit acts of genocide, terror and torture, all the while pretending to be noble and good. And let's not forget our old friend the television - gone are the days of my youth when we could witness some actual journalistic integrity on the news, along with some innocently entertaining shows like "Gilligan's Island". Now we must listen to the corporate propaganda machine spew forth so much sewage they call news, all the while trying to amuse and divert us with salacious filth and mindless stupidity dressed as entertainment.

"Men are more easily governed through their vices than through their virtues." Napoleon Bonaparte

I used to think that knowledge of humanity was cumulative, that we could learn from the examples throughout history and say, no, Nazi Germany could never happen now, Hiroshima and Nagasaki were just a one-off, we'll never make those mistakes again. True freedom must be defended continually, and against all enemies. People have asked me, aren't you afraid of speaking out about 9-11, aren't you worried? Now whom should I be worried about, the awful Muslim radical type Al Qaeda terrorists that have been so well defined by the US government, or the US government itself?

"America will never be destroyed from the outside. If we falter and lose our freedoms, it will be because we destroyed ourselves." - Abraham Lincoln

Come on folks, is anybody really falling for the oldest trick in the book? First, you must make the people afraid that they will be attacked, so we attack ourselves and frighten the bejeezes out of everybody, then we smear and vilify anybody who doesn't defend our position as being unpatriotic, and sympathetic to the terrorists. It's the old "bait and switch" routine, and if you buy it so readily then go downtown and play a few games of 3 Card Monty - I hear there's pretty good odds there too. My being gets filled with revulsion when I watch that "commander in filth" stand there and utter ridiculous statements like, "If you're not with us, you're with the terrorists". Now what kind of specious, dumb-ass logic is that? Especially when you consider that he himself is the terrorist in question. Reminds me of that original Star Trek episode "The Changeling" when they slap the anti-gravs onto Nomad the robot. "If you are the creator then you are perfect, but if you made a mistake then you cannot be the creator". Now let's try it today, "If I am not with you, then I am with the terrorists, but, if you are the terrorist, then how can I be with you and not with the terrorists.... Kaboom!" Me and Nomad both have smoke billowing out our ass - where's the miniskirt blond from Rigel 6 when you need her?

"It takes a whole village to raise an idiot, and a controlled media to make him president" - Peter Zaza

Realize that everything you experience from the limited lamestream media perspective is a form of low-level reality - riddled with half-truths, partial-truths, and a lot of no-truths at all. Designed to confuse and program you, the enemy - yes, that's right - it isn't some Iraqi, or Iranian, or Korean, or Chinese - they are all targets as well, nobody is exempt from this vast scourge creeping over the earth - and lest you think this is mere paranoia, the proof is now being publicly exposed everywhere, all you have to do is open your eyes, or more directly - open your mind. The proof is in the utter secrecy surrounding plans for unification, the proof is in the writings of the United Nations and Agenda 21, the CFR, the Bilderberg Group. The proof is in the way they have been systematically spraying the skies of this planet for 4 decades now, and denying it. Just go outside and look up, or if you don't get out much - look up "Chemtrails" on your Google. Lots of theories about this one; are they dumping chemicals that cause or inhibit global warming? Are they forcing some mind altering drug on everyone? Is it connected to the HAARP technology? Is it killing off the bees? Weather creation? Population control? Let's get some answers, after all - we're being sprayed like cockroaches, and our tax dollars and health are paying for it.

More proof

The proof is in the way I have yet to hear one cogent, logical explanation from the US government about key issues concerning the 9/11 tragedy, like WTC 7 and its mystery collapse, like molten metal found under all 3 sites, like stand-down of the military, like put options, like war-games, like gag orders, like evidence destruction, like the first time the NTSB doesn't do an investigation on a plane crash, like many warnings not to fly, like melting of steel by jet fuel, like no black box recordings released, like wire transfers of money to supposed terrorists, etc. One of my biggest proofs is the fact that the upholders of the official story continue to shout smears and ad hominem attack on anyone who questions any of these anomalies - but absolutely refuses to address the issues raised and offer resolution of the incongruities put forth. The proof is in the way I've sent many letters to politicians, newspapers and magazines concerning 9/11 truth - and not one single person has ever had the decency to write me back, or even acknowledge receipt of my communication - yet, every time I have written to people like Dr. David Ray Griffin, Dr. Bob Bowman, Barry Zwicker, Kevin Barrett, and many others, I get a reply - usually within a few days.

One important proof worth considering is the fact that those planes had not even brought down those towers yet and we had news reports about the al Qaeda terrorists and Osama being fed to us. Did anybody think to ask within those first few hours what evidence there was, and how did they get this evidence? Those forensics boys work pretty quick, but that's ridiculous. I'd like to know how anybody can piece together a case like that and have it announced while we're still watching a gaping, smoking hole in the WTC towers.

I suppose it was important to begin inculcating everyone with the myth at this critical time – the wound is wide open, time to implant the insidious virus which will begin it's work - you always remember the first story you hear as being the most logical, especially when your reasoning faculties are suppressed and more easily manipulated. Subjects are in a state of shock - training over decades has bred complacent, child like collective mentality that looks toward authority figure of government for help and direction. People will easily be imprinted with the first story that fits their world and offers any explanation or possible resolution. The psychological warfare and it's manipulations of the public consciousness is capped off with the date itself, 911, my goodness, when there is a huge emergency what do you do? Better call 911. There's fear, panic, dogs refuse to bark all over the neighborhood, help me daddy, I'm calling, can't you hear me, 911, 911...

The proof is in the way I haven't seen one piece of evidence that those 19 Arab guys were even on any of those airplanes, no passenger manifests, no pictures or video tapes from the airport showing them boarding planes, no record of ticket purchases. Don't you see how obviously ridiculous it is? Come on - you've got the airport videos showing passengers, so just show us the video of the hijackers with the other passengers, we will all believe you in 2 seconds if you show the proof, what? you don't want to release the information to back up your case? Why the hell should I believe your story when you have evidence but won't show it to me, that just tells me what you say is a lie. No video of the "plane" hitting the Pentagon either, or the seized tapes from a gas station and hotel nearby. Why on earth would you want to withhold such vital evidence unless you were guilty? There is simply no logical explanation for them hiding and destroying the evidence, unless the evidence points directly at them.

Perhaps the best theory I've heard about this event is the one put forth by Webster Griffin Tarpley. He explains how there were around 20 or more war game exercises taking place the day of 9/11, with more than a few of them enacting scenarios wherein hijacked planes would be flown into buildings. At the last couple of seconds, the drill is "flipped live" and the attack being simulated is committed for real. Tarpley explains how the secret network responsible have moles infiltrating the highest levels of government in order to pull off this complex operation, using CIA groomed Muslim patsies to take the fall. He also explains how the shadow government threatens Bush, and gets him to capitulate to their demands or else "angel is next". In effect, there was a coup that took place that day - code words fly about the globe, secret agencies from other countries have parts to play, the military is running around all confused playing war games, other nations are on high alert - it's like a well-crafted espionage novel except we are still living it - the way I figure, right now in the story is about the time you and I jump in and do something. Would you be surprised to discover that the London 7/7 bombings also had drills involving terrorist bombers being played out at the exact same time the actual events occurred? Incredible coincidence, eh Watson?

Meet the Press

"There is no such thing, at this date of the world's history, in America, as an independent press. You know it and I know it. There is not one of you who dares to write your honest opinions, and if you did, you know beforehand that it would never appear in print. "I am paid weekly for keeping my honest opinions out of the paper I am connected with. Others of you are paid similar salaries for similar things, and any of you who would be so foolish as to write honest opinions would be out on the streets looking for another job. If I allowed my honest opinions to appear in one issue of my paper, before twenty-four hours my occupation would be gone. "The business of the Journalist is to destroy truth; To lie outright; To pervert; To vilify; We are intellectual prostitutes" - John Swinton, the former chief of staff of the New York Times 1880

"The Central Intelligence Agency owns everyone of any significance in the major media." - William Colby, former CIA director

"We know in the not too distant future, a half dozen corporations are going to control the media. We took this step (merger) to ensure we were one of them" - Time Warner spokesperson

That's the nub of it for ya - currently there are five corporations that own all of the mainstream media, and those same people have vested interests in the military industrial complex. They make all kinds of wonderful products that enrich our lives, as well as bombs that kill and mutilate - pass the sugar. We have been trained our entire life to believe that what we see on that TV is somehow representative of reality. And now? Now I believe that you can take whatever message they give you - search for the diametrical opposite in your mind, and be sure that the negative value of what they say is instead the truth. Show me the United Nations with their slogans about peace and harmony, I'll tell you about misery and bloodshed. Sing me the lyrical song about Harmonization and Prosperity - I will tell you about corporate fascism, segregation and cultural divisiveness. Talk about bringing Freedom and Democracy to Iraq - just look at the tyranny and genocide. Watch the fecal matter fly out of their mouths about the "War on Drugs" - I'll show you a CIA complicit in the Central American and Afghanistan drug trade. Then we can look at the big business of the prison industrial complex, a commercialized system of slave labour. Corrections facilities are filled with many people who have never aggressed upon another individual, or another person's property - locked up for years of their life, in some cases working for 20 cents an hour for big American Companies who don't have to worry about employee benefits - and they get to use labels that say "made in the USA".

War on Drugs? War on Poverty? War on Terror? It's always war on somebody with these people - marginalization and exclusion of a targeted group, aggression, deceit, injustice. Create that differential through disturbance, because when there's a steady state there is no movement, fluctuation provides great opportunity for profit and control. If you have prescient knowledge of the variables, you can create the crisis, induce reaction, offer resolution, and clean up profit-wise on the differential inherent in the controlled dynamic. Slap on a few no-bid contracts for your buddies, adjust a few widgets here, shove these assets over there, kill those ones there, no wait, sorry, I meant kill those ones AND those ones over there. Set up the false left-right struggle and watch the boneheads duke it out - all the while we control both sides, so guess who always has to win. Look in the mirror everybody - what a putz!

How far should we go? Maybe we could explore the malfeasance inherent within the entire Federal Reserve System, a misnomer of course - they are not Federal, and they don't have any reserves. What about the IRS, absolutely ruining peoples lives for how many decades now without the legal authority to actually do anything. The CIA? Tell me how its ok to use tax dollars to plan military takeovers of democratically elected governments, or carry out assassinations, import drugs, and contravene any pretense of international law. Oh, and as a complete non sequitur - I could never figure out why the big reconstruction contracts for Iraq were not handed to the Iraqis themselves, give them a wage, let them build their country back up while building up their bank accounts, the bootstrap thing, the American way - You know, all that horse-shit! Enough examples, there are literally hundreds of things we could talk about at great length - and it just makes you sick, assuming you have a pulse.

I've stopped paying attention whatsoever to mainstream media, like many others I utilize alternative news sources that provide me with more honest accounts of reality than the TV's lead story and the never ending web of lies. I've lost so much anger and frustration with my life through this awakening, and it's all because I've figured out how and why I've been manipulated for so long. I used to sit there and swear at the TV, feeling as if my intelligence was being insulted, but not understanding why. About 20 years ago I started putting on the mute button during all the commercials, so then I would just swear at the news. I used to play video games, now I don't - perhaps such activities provide a release mechanism for all that pent up frustration. I stopped wondering why every single network would carry the same stories, the same way - stopped wondering why that cheese-dick kid in Asia was wearing the same stupid shorts half way down his ass with a ball-cap turned sideways, or backwards on purpose, as all those other cheese-dick kids in the States, Italy, you name it. I had to wonder what force could make the same styles and trends popular everywhere, at the same time. Don't you ever wonder about such things? like when a movie or book comes out dealing with the wild west, or aliens, or whatever - a bunch of others come out at the same time, and not just copycats mimicking to cash in on a popular idea, I mean they all get released concurrently, it's as if the popular culture is dictated to and operating via mandate, and indeed it is. Network television is thus relegated to the same level of truth and integrity as any late night infomercial we are beleaguered with when yon Morpheus denies us respite from the daily mail.

After somebody lies to me 10,000 times over my entire life, I'm a bit reticent to believe their stories "absent some catastrophic and catalyzing event" like hearing some actual truth for once. They must be telling a lie - after all, "I saw it on TV".

Life in the New World Order - Soul Mates or Cell Mates?

"The drive of the Rockefellers and their allies is to create a one-world government all under their control.... Do I mean conspiracy? Yes I do. I am convinced there is such a plot, international in scope, generations old in planning, and incredibly evil in intent." - Congressman Larry P. McDonald, 1976

"Pay no attention to that man behind the curtain!"

Our lives are being directed according to a business plan. The agenda has been laid out over decades and centuries, we are just led to believe it's happening in real time. There are some very significant dates coming up within the next few short years. Hard to imagine that we are smack dab in the middle of an end-game scenario, with plans coming to fruition that have been laid out and documented since at least the 1920's and 30's. Even more incredible, you can literally go back hundreds of years to find out it's the same basic cast of characters through elite bloodlines responsible for secret societies and shadow governments. Members of this group are said to include such prominent families as the Rothschilds, Rockefellers, Morgans, Duponts, as well as presidents, prime ministers and European monarchs.

Using their influence through international organizations such as the World Bank, the IMF, the CFR, the United Nations and NATO, the objective of the internationalists is nothing less than the subjugation of everyone on the planet to a one world government. How long has all this been going on? Without stretching the limits of your indulgence regarding quotations (I'll do that later), consider these, which, if you disregard the names and dates, could easily have been uttered this morning:

"The world is governed by very different personages from what is imagined by those who are not behind the scenes." - Prime Minister Benjamin Disraeli of England 1844

"From the days of Spartacus, Wieskhopf, Karl Marx, Trotsky, Rosa Luxemburg, and Emma Goldman, this world conspiracy has been steadily growing. This conspiracy played a definite recognizable role in the tragedy of the French revolution. It has been the mainspring of every subversive movement during the 19th century. And now at last this band of extraordinary personalities from the underworld of the great cities of Europe and America have gripped the Russian people by the hair of their head and have become the undisputed masters of that enormous empire."- Winston Churchill London Press 1922

" If the people only understood the rank injustice of our money and banking system, there would be a revolution before morning." - President Andrew Jackson 1829-1837

"The real menace of our republic is this invisible government which like a giant octopus sprawls its slimy length over city, state and nation. Like the octopus of real life, it operates under cover of a self created screen....At the head of this octopus are the Rockefeller Standard Oil interests and a small group of powerful banking houses generally referred to as international bankers. The little coterie of powerful international bankers virtually run the United States government for their own selfish purposes. They practically control both political parties." New York City Mayor John F. Hylan, 1922

"The real truth of the matter is, as you and I know, that a financial element in the larger centers has owned the Government ever since the days of Andrew Jackson" - President Franklin D. Roosevelt 1933

"The real rulers in Washington are invisible, and exercise power from behind the scenes." Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter, 1952

The Council on Foreign Relations states the following on their website:

"Three former high-ranking government officials from Canada, Mexico, and the United States call for a North American economic and security community by 2010 to address shared security threats, challenges to competitiveness, and interest in broad-based development across the three countries."

"North America is vulnerable on several fronts: the region faces terrorist and criminal security threats, increased economic competition from abroad, and uneven economic development at home. In response to these challenges, a trilateral, Independent Task Force on the Future of North America has developed a roadmap to promote North American security and advance the well-being of citizens of all three countries." - May 2005 task force report Building a North American Community published by the Council on Foreign Relations and criminal threat we face in North America is from the US government itself. There is a long history of false flag operations or self inflicted wounds like 9-11 committed by this country, so having us join them would surely not mitigate that threat, rather it would increase. As far as competition or uneven economic development, the market will have to take care of any imbalances within itself. Just because the economy is not doing so well right now is no excuse to do away with a sovereign country and abrogate our rights as free individuals, or steal our resources. There is no reason to believe that secretly plotting to merge these nations against the will of their citizens would advance the well-being of anyone, instead, it would destroy our heritage and turn us all into slaves of a corporate fascist state. No thanks. Same goes for the plans to adopt a new common currency for all 3 countries, as if we should have anything to do with the corruption tied to the Federal Reserve System. I would rather not have any part of a nation that can remove people from their home, torture and imprison them, and then deny them any right to a fair trial. What happened to sweet land of liberty, oh right, that's just a song.

Everyone should be aware that the corporate elites in this world fully endorse the Red Chinese model of social governance and economics as the standard for their emerging New World Order. That is the reason for the FEMA camps that have been set up currently under the guise of emergency centers for immigration, natural disaster, or "other". As per the Chinese model, dissidents will be dealt with severely and placed into work camps. A United Nations global police force will help keep everyone in line, once they implement their plans for the Universal Biometrics Identification Card.

"Whatever the price of the Chinese Revolution, it has obviously succeeded not only in producing more efficient and dedicated administration, but also in fostering high morale and community of purpose. The social experiment in China under Chairman Mao's leadership is one of the most important and successful in human history." David Rockefeller 1973 New York Times

The movers and shakers of this world will use any means necessary to force their plans of unification on the world. Any issue, whether real, imagined or created can and will be utilized to achieve their objectives; overpopulation, global warming, disease, natural disasters, civil unrest. Population control measures include biological warfare targeting food supply, as well as various methods of climate manipulation through Chemtrails spraying and implementation of the HAARP technology .

The net has begun to close. You are not going to like the changes coming up - we will be forced, bribed and cajoled into accepting new identification measures, new laws, new taxes for global warming, new taxes for more security. After all, there's going to be a lot of angry Iraqi Muslim terrorist types who are out to kill us, especially after we invaded, then decimated their country, destroyed their noble and learned culture, killed about a million of them, displaced a few million more. I guess you could say they might be a tad snarly towards America. They hate our freedoms huh? I guess after we brought our freedom and democracy to them so spectacularly in Iraq, they checked it out and said, "I hate it".

*"The terrorist is the one with the small bomb" -
Brendan Behan*

You're going to hear more hoo-ha about things like the NAU, the Amero, RFID chips, you're going to see more jack-booted heavily armed militia types wearing Kevlar, detaining you and abrogating every god-given right you once had, rights that were once so beautifully encoded by those brilliant fathers of the Constitution, you remember the Constitution don't you? - that inspired set of principles that once made America the envy of the world, until the likes of Bush, Cheney and Rumsfeld ripped it up and wiped their arses with it, all the while laughing while they grew rich and flushed the country and it's noble ideals down the toilet.

"The two enemies of the people are criminals and government, so let us tie the second down with the chains of the Constitution so the second will not become the legalized version of the first." - Thomas Jefferson

"The deterioration of every government begins with the decay of the principles on which it was founded" - Charles-Louis De Secondat 1748

The coup has already happened folks, you're too busy worried about Democrats and Republicans, but the truth is - these crooks rigged at least a couple of elections which is common knowledge, so they assumed power illegitimately. In reality, the false left/right paradigm is but another low-level reality to keep the masses diverted and occupied. Republican or Democrat, they all answer to the same bosses - now would you like Coke or Coke Classic? - it's the same damned pop. And how nice when you control the military, the media, the judiciary, the senate - you can just pretend you have support, even if the vast majority of people in your own country are fully cognizant of the fact that you lie, cheat, murder and abuse. How else can you explain the polls which show 80 - 90% of the populace demanding an end to war, or a real investigation of the US government's unquestionable cover up and involvement in 9/11. A real opposition would call them on at least some of the lies, a real media would research some of the corruption, a real Supreme Court would hold everyone accountable to the law. These guys are good at it too, they make the Sopranos look like choir boys. There's going to be more fireworks so get ready. These psychopaths are being backed into a corner, and it's going to get rough.

"A state of war only serves as an excuse for domestic tyranny" - Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn

Starting to get hot around here

"There is nothing wrong with the planet. The planet is fine . . . been here 4 1/2 billion years. We've been here, what, a 100,000 years, maybe 200,000. And we've only been engaged in heavy industry a little over 200 years. 200 years versus 4 1/2 billion. And we have the conceit to think that somehow we're a threat? The planet isn't going away. We are." - George Carlin

The global warming thing is already past due and beginning to stink. Any sane person would have to admit that this planet is in some kind of trouble if we don't properly manage our resources and stop polluting ourselves into ecological extinction. What I object to is the way the globalists are trying to use this fact, and sometimes distort it to further their own agenda. I can remember back in the 70s when we were told about the cooling down of the earth and the impending ice age. Soon they will find a way to blame and tax us for the temperature rising on other planets as well, in the meantime - let's see a few of you politicians get out of your limos and hop on a bus like a regular shmoe.

*"'Protecting the Environment' is a ruse. The goal is the political and economic subjugation of most men by the few, under the guise of preserving nature."
- J. H. Robbins*

Witness all the stark incongruity that exists in this strange world of ours - there are now special units that check garbage cans to make sure people are fined for not managing their refuse properly, we're made to feel like some kind of criminal if we screw up sorting our tin cans. I only hope that they make a carbon tax that is very high so we can feel guilty for driving the car to buy milk, or pay a fine for using a 60W bulb - meanwhile, the US government is dumping depleted uranium that will continue to poison the earth for, let's say (glances at watch) 5 BILLION YEARS. But never mind that - don't you dare put the plastic milk jug in the same box with the cardboard - you Bastard!

Thomas Jefferson

"If totalitarianism wins this conflict, the world will be ruled by tyrants, and individuals will be slaves. If democracy wins, the nations of the earth will be united in a commonwealth of free peoples, and individuals, wherever found, will be the sovereign units of the new world order." - Declaration of the Federation of the World

Two men stand at the top of a mountain - one man sees the panoramic beauty of all existence, the line of sky between earth and the heavens but a jumping off point for his consciousness - what other worlds? what other possibilities in my mind? What a blessing and a benediction is this life, I have my family, my friends, and all the beauty of nature at this moment to behold. The other man stands in the exact spot - he sees an opportunity to capitalize on the richness of the mountain, extract the ore, use the local tribe for cheap labour, and if I can just get rid of this guy standing beside me...

We spend most of our lives trying to acquire things like knowledge, experience, wealth, respect. Once past a certain point in our lives, usually closer to the end, many find themselves trying to cast off those trappings they have spent a lifetime gathering, seeing all such things as chains or diversions, layers between ourselves and our truth. Focused within the resolution provided through the lens of wisdom, and diminishing opportunity of time - those vestments, once thought as prizes to be won, can be seen as constraints that limit one's true potential. We learn to redefine our perspectives or else we end up very frustrated with the world, our greatest fear being stagnation and mental intransigence, which only inhibits growth and progression in our life. We learn that the only thing constant in this world is change.

"Never doubt that a small group of thoughtful, committed citizens can change the world. Indeed, it's the only thing that ever has."
Margaret Mead

Change is good, change is inevitable, but no matter how many things might change in our life there will always remain certain constants that must never change. You know, basic things, like the things we learn as children - simple rules that tell us it's wrong to lie, to kill, to steal. These things do not change because you are a bus driver, a politician, a multi-billionaire, or you work for the CIA.

"The direct use of force is such a poor solution to any problem, it is generally employed only by small children and large nations" - David Friedman

I spent my whole life thinking I could avoid politics and anything to do with the public realm. I believed that if I just looked after myself and my family, what happened outside of my little sphere would not matter too much. After all, I've never hurt anyone, always paid my taxes, was known to enjoy the odd hockey game with a beer. My discovery of the truth regarding 9/11, followed by my realization of the malevolent forces that control our world has turned my life around, and so once again I must change.

*"Just because you do not take an interest in politics doesn't mean politics won't take an interest in you."
- Pericles 430 B.C.*

The raising of my family confers upon me the responsibility to try and make sure they can grow up in a world where mass-murderers are not allowed to rule the planet, despoiling the earth and killing whomever necessary to fit their plans for expansion and domination. As the saying goes, it's not about right and left, its about right and wrong! If somebody marched into your country, accused you of international high crimes, occupied your land and slaughtered your family and friends while stealing your resources, and was then found to be guilty of lying about those accusations - which were subsequently proved to be categorically false, but stayed on year after year, killing, stealing, lying....Would that seem all right to you? How can you not allow that same reasoning to prevail for the people of Iraq, or anywhere else?

"Right is right, even if everyone is against it, and wrong is wrong, even if everyone is for it" - William Penn

I am just one person, but we are many. In every sense they have lost the battle with me, and so I know it is possible for others. The truth movement is only gaining in strength with each passing day. The truth will out, every time - it's only got one way to go. I salute the great people in this movement who have inspired me with their integrity, their bravery, and most of all their brilliance as scholars in search of the truth. And on the other side, I feel only contempt for those who knowingly uphold such deceit and hypocrisy which brings us all to war.

"An individual's character is not defined by their circumstance, it is revealed through it" - Peter Zaza

I am able to live in a psychologically clean environment where nobody rules my thoughts, I pay little attention to the mainstream media, other than to discern the true subtext of every headline and article so blatantly part of the grand pysops campaign. Most importantly, I have a cause, and a true inner moral compass with which I can live my life and fight this battle, and let's be clear - this is going to be tantamount to war - a war for our thoughts, and as so many who are still dying every day prove to us all - a battle for our very lives.

"There may be times when we are powerless to prevent injustice, but there must never be a time when we fail to protest." - Elie Wiesel

Yes, the truth can only get bigger, it is within its nature. Those who would adhere to the myths promulgated by liars must employ increasingly desperate measures - repressive laws, no fly lists, surveillance, termination of basic rights, more aggressive tactics to instill fear. Fascist dictators do not claw back measures like the egregiously titled Patriot Act, they don't make bogus laws giving themselves omnipotent powers because they intend to repeal them 6 months later, they just keep on exposing themselves further as parasites and psychopaths, with ever more obvious signs of their waning struggle for power. Do you want the Patriot Act? Or do you want to act like a patriot?

"They who would give up an essential liberty for temporary security, deserve neither liberty or security." Benjamin Franklin.

"Why, the Government is merely...a temporary servant...Its function is to obey orders, not originate them." - Mark Twain

Something else seems to happen in these situations as shown to us through history - there will be a large economic correction or depression which will help settle the matter of the current cabal in office. It will most likely be expensive for us all, but the cost of our hubris and callous indifference will exact a price on ordinary men, as well as the nations they support.

"Wars are not paid for in wartime, the bill comes later" - Benjamin Franklin

It's too bad really, they could have invested those trillions of dollars and all that human potential into energy research, education, health care, anything to do with the betterment of mankind rather than its destruction. Instead, they opted to make war and commit the worst crimes of humanity in some insane quest for dominance.

"When the power of love overcomes the love of power the world will know peace." - Jimi Hendrix

How can we retain hope or have any chance of true fulfillment in our lives with all this going on?

"When I despair, I remember that all through history the way of Truth and Love has always won. There have been tyrants and murderers and for a time they can seem invincible, but in the end they always fall. Think of it, always." - Mahatma Gandhi

I alone retain complete and utter sovereignty over my life - no one gave me my freedom, and no one is going to take it from me. I refuse to carry RFID tracking devices, biometric implants, or whatever else you want to use to restrict and monitor my life. I will not let you degrade and humiliate me at airports, roadside checks, random searches, or whatever else you concoct to try and subjugate us with in the name of your bullshit war on terror. I reject your new world order and the idiot box TV it rode in on.

I challenge everyone to turn off the television, do some research and think for yourself. Stop looking toward anybody outside of yourself for direction, leadership, understanding or help in this world - especially if that someone is a politician. Stop waiting for somebody else to get their hands dirty and fix all the problems.

Stop thinking about other people who live on this Earth as being other.

911 Truth - You, Me and the SPP

I've got a question for Bush, Harper and Calderon. If you truly value democracy, the rule of law, and government by the will of the people, then why are you hiding in secret like rats scared to expose your plans to the light of day? Why not hold a referendum in all three countries and ask the citizens of this continent if they want to be unified, dissolve our national identities and borders, or share a common currency? But the leaders of these countries won't do that, because they are not democratically elected officials of free individuals living within any sort of constitutional democracy, they are instead fascist dictators who must bring the plans for unification into being according to an agenda - they are sock puppets who do the bidding of international bankers and the power elite of this world, and they must slither behind an ugly and brutal militia who will wield their clubs onto the heads of ordinary citizens - people who want nothing more than to have a voice by electing officials who represent them - that's what government is supposed to be about, isn't it?. If we had a real media with real investigative reporters, there would be a million questions and headlines and scandals and trials, but we do not, instead we have a propaganda machine owned by the military industrial complex, they are just like an infomercial that will tell you any kind of cheap disgusting lie while trying to get you to buy their stuff.

Agreements like the The Security and Prosperity Partnership of North America(SPP) should be null and void by the very nature of their incarnation, put forth by unelected officials, totally against the will of virtually all the citizenry, and only in the best interests of a select few. But it looks like they will push forward - and like some converging lines in a perspective drawing the currencies of all three nations will level off to a close approximation of parity until it's time for a new crisis induced by government - reaction will be people that are frightened, confused, and purposefully thrust into sudden panic mode, so big brother will step in with the resolution. Don't trouble yourself about the crashed economy we deliberately drove into the ground with our hegemonic wars of aggression and genocide - remember, war is good for business, and you've got your entertainment, your "bread and circuses". Don't be one of those conspiracy theorist nut jobs and get lopped in with that crowd, come over here my little children, we've got the shiny new Amero to solve the money problem, and a new global police force headed by the benevolent UN to keep the order, don't forget the new ID measures we will force upon you - or you can't drive, or travel, or be outside these lines after a certain time, or whatever else we want to say and make you do. Look at how docile you all were when we implemented the completely criminal "anti-terror measures" or the "no-fly lists" - or the way we dazzled your game-show blinded eyes with colour-coded alert schemes from the Department of Homeland Buffoonery. These poor bastards will let us do whatever the hell we want to them, and they will be so scared of being marginalized because of the beautiful psyche job we've done on them since birth through TV and all the rest of that crud we call mainstream media - they won't even kick up a fuss, or so some might think. But that's not really how I see it, and I truly do have a lot more faith in the common people of this world.

Human dynamics dictate something quite different to me. When I was trying to learn the difficult art of computer animation I discovered something very quickly about the way humans move. At first I would assign a start and end point to the movement of an object - like moving a character's arm let's say - and so the computer would dutifully move the animated limb in a linear fashion from point A to B over X amount of time - problem is, that's not very representative of human physical dynamics. There will typically be a sloping logarithmic curve to the velocity of virtually any action, basically the process starts slow then rapidly ascends to its end point - look at the way you reach for a cup or take a step forward - the acceleration curve is much like how movements of resistance occur throughout history. Subjugate women unjustly for centuries, make them suffer and struggle for so long, and then witness such a beautiful iteration of the indomitable human spirit and brilliance of intellect as evinced through Susan B. Anthony and Elizabeth Caty Stanton - do yourself a favour and read the story of these remarkable women who persevered their entire lives fighting for women's equality and the right to vote. Look at the slaves in America (the first ones, not us), and witness the rising up of a people against brutality and injustice. All human movements start out slow, but gain momentum hurtling to the end stage. We are fast approaching that final stage - which gives us two obvious choices. Either everything I've learned and believe right now is a complete fabrication and ergo I'm just some nut, ok fine - another nut. I only wish it were so - or, the second possibility being we are correct and there is going to be big trouble for us all very soon if we don't do something about it, and if those 800 plus FEMA camps actually do exist to hold dissidents - then you have a bigger problem still. How are you going to rationalize them taking away your friends and family, people just like me that have committed no crime, have not aggressed upon any other individual or their property, and have done nothing more than think for themselves and question the bloodshed and injustice in this ravaged world of ours? Better yet, if it really happens that way I will count myself lucky to be with the kind of people I've met in this movement - frankly, I would be too ashamed to stick around with the likes of those who could allow such a nightmare to occur. I will live free, standing up straight and telling the truth with many other people who care about honour, truth and human dignity - the rest of you can grab a set of kneepads and some fresh lip balm - the double

"If you will not fight for the right, when you can easily win without bloodshed, if you will not fight when your victory will be sure and not so costly, you may come to the moment when you will have to fight with all the odds against you and only a precarious chance for survival. There may be a worse case. You may have to fight when there is no chance of victory, because it is better to perish than to live as slaves."

- Winston Churchill.

911 Truth is the single most important issue in all our lives right now - as Canadians, as North Americans, and as a citizens of this planet. As long as we do not deal directly with this lie, we will continually be forced to play a part in all it's subsequent crimes, and pay the ultimate price of our freedom because of willful ignorance or moral cowardice. Our government tells us we are in Afghanistan because of the Canadians who lost their lives on 9/11 - and they believe the US government's "conspiracy theory" about Osama bin Laden and the 19 Muslim hijackers, without any real investigation or proof. Moreover, all signs point to the US government being complicit in the staging of this false flag operation. Do some research on these kinds of events, particularly all the declassified material, and then ask how they could do such a thing? Your answer will be something like - the same way it's been done a thousand times before. Ask yourself why they would remove all the material from the crime scene and withhold evidence. Does this make sense to anyone? Just think about it - let's pretend their fairy tale story is absolutely true - the planes hit the towers, the towers fell down - and what does reason then dictate as a course of action for the government of the USA? Would you cordon off the crime scene and go over the forensic evidence in a painstaking fashion in order to solidify the case against your attackers? or would you quickly remove and hide everything, which is supposed to be against the law. Would you ask all the first responders what they saw and heard, and then use that evidence to bolster your case, or would you place them all under gag orders and make them fight for 5 years just to get their stories told. Why would they do that? - are you still there? I want an answer to this one especially, because it seems fairly obvious that if you want a few hundred people to keep their mouths shut about what they saw and heard, the only possible explanation can be that you are hiding something and they are saying things you do not want people to know. Why is that? - it is only because the bombs which took the towers down were heard and felt by many people - bombs mean collusion - no longer tenable is the story of the 19 Arab guys with box-cutters - now we must explain how anyone could get inside those buildings and precisely plant the charges necessary to cause these monolithic structures to fall in an exact way. No other way is possible for these buildings to descend as they did except within the demolition model - that's what we see happening with all three buildings, that's what many people on the scene witnessed first hand - and yet that is the scenario which was not even explored by the bogus investigations sponsored by the criminals who committed the crime. Ask yourself why they would not consider a demolition model in their bought and paid for investigations, and then ask yourself why they didn't even mention Building 7 at all - or why the NTSB didn't do an investigation on these plane crashes, the first time that's happened. So many whys - so little investigation.

Used as a pretext for the genocide in Iraq and Afghanistan, this event is also a turning point and a catalyst for the bigger plan to implement a one world government, complete with the destruction of nationalities and cultural identities. These plans have been documented and clearly indicate an agenda for the formation of a North American Union in 2010, and subsequently a ceding of power to the UN global police force in 2012.

"There is little difference between a short life and a long life - both are just a moment in time" - Taoist proverb

So much can happen in just a split second of time - let's try and deconstruct one such moment. I'm watching the lead story on network news here in Canada the other night - before us are two figures; Defence Minister Gordon O'Connor and Rick Hillier, Chief of the Defence Staff. The purpose of this particular news conference is to convey the message to all Canadians - these guys are on the same page, and they vow to quash the voices of opposition and dissent here at home so that Canada can continue it's noble mission in Afghanistan.

Something else happens in this nanosecond of time. Way over there in Afghanistan and just 90 miles away from a Canadian army unit, there is a village where suspected Taliban are hiding - Solution: Bombs with Depleted Uranium, you know that stuff don't you? We make it here in Canada, we store it and distribute it against international treaties we supposedly adhere to - this is powerful stuff this DU, rips through heavy duty armour plating like butter. And within that split second when the bombs hit, and the limbs of all the wives, children and everyone else get splattered outward at high velocity, shorn not so neatly from their bloody stumps, I would ask you this O'Connor and Hillier, if you cared to strain your ears over the screams of innocent victims whose lives are shattered or gone forever, the latter being the only preferable option of the two. What do you think is the reason for us killing people and having our own sons and daughters die in Afghanistan? I believe these two guys standing there in their respective costumes are probably quite typical of people who think they are fulfilling a sense of duty for their country - I believe they are wrong, and I'm going to ask you to realize the part YOU are playing in this ugly charade that debases and demoralizes us all. I ask you to consider these facts regarding Canada and it's mission in Afghanistan:

NATO troops are indiscriminately killing civilians. The Canadian Senate Report concluded that life in Khandahar is "clearly more perilous because we are there". Canadian Corporations are profiting from the death and destruction in Afghanistan NATO members continue to deploy radioactive weaponry such as depleted uranium munitions which contaminates the environment and the human genome for billions of years. 60% of those elected to the Afghan parliament in October 2005 were criminals. Violence against women and girls in Afghanistan is pervasive. Afghan women continue to face rape, harassment and sexual violence. Canadians are fighting a war that is NOT about terrorism but is about the projection of power, money and resource control. As of April 2007, 57% of Canadians oppose the war in Afghanistan. Canada is deeply integrated within the U.S. military industrial complex. Canadians invest in hundreds of war industries through the Canada Pension Plan, including 16 of the world's top 20 weapons' manufacturers

We live in a strange culture - like the TV commercial where Mom keeps spraying the freshener into junior's bedroom to mask all the smells - and I want to know - why the hell don't you just clean up the damned room and give it all a good scrubbing with ammonia, junior first? But that is not our way - don't look at the truth, just throw on some more mushroom fodder so that everyone will be so blinded by the stench emanating from the new fetid pile on top, they won't even bother to care about the foulness coming from below. But it's still there - 911 is not going away, doesn't matter how many wars you start, how many innocent people you torture without trial in your phony war OF terror. It's horrendous, we are all diminished by the criminal, despicable actions of these people. They destroy the rule of law and distort every precept of human decency for their own selfish gain. They are not righteous leaders who deserve our respect and admiration, they are lowly thugs who must face justice or we as a society have failed and we have no soul.

Yes, I'm going to say it once more and then you must do some research - 911 was an inside job. Myself and a few hundred million people on this earth could prove it quite easily if we were allowed the benefit of a real investigation, if we had a fair and just judicial system that would weigh the merits of all the evidence just like in a real criminal case. If we had an honest, independent media that was not merely a propaganda tool of the military industrial complex - the same people who have a vested interest in wars and the manufacturing of bombs that kill and mutilate, and all the great rising profit shares and financial dividends that go along with it - it's disgusting, it's degrading, it's also amazing that most decent, hard working individuals are living this fantastic lie so they can pay their taxes and fund this enterprise. This thin veneer of reality holding society within it's false grip will be stripped clean with some of the predicted manoeuvres of these Machiavellian psychopaths - if you happened to read the article published by a British Journal called "The Guardian" on April 9th 2007 called "Revolution, flashmobs, and brain chips. A grim vision of the future" - you would have to wince at the projected use of high tech weaponry that will be utilized to quell the mobs reacting to stresses brought on by overpopulation, natural disasters or various other sometimes induced states of disorder.

"The development of neutron weapons which destroy living organs but not buildings "might make a weapon of choice for extreme ethnic cleansing in an increasingly populated world". The use of unmanned weapons platforms would enable the "application of lethal force without human intervention, raising consequential legal and ethical issues". The "explicit use" of chemical, biological, radiological, and nuclear weapons and devices delivered by unmanned vehicles or missiles." - Richard Norton-Taylor

The fact that they write about it and predict it's necessity means they have it all ready to go right now.

But that's not the kind of story we're given on the nightly news, instead we are spoon-fed the fuzzy, feel-good CBC piece about the troops playing a quick game of road hockey, or how they get the Tim Horton's Coffee sent to them to help ameliorate the difficult task of indiscriminate killing. Show me anything but the truth about what the hell is going on in both Afghanistan and Iraq. Oh - don't tell me that stuff, I don't want to hear it, it's so depressing - I work all day in and day out to eke out a living wage - and still I'm always just 2 paychecks away from financial ruin - I haven't got time to figure all this out and then try and fix it. Sorry folks, there is no hero arriving in act 3 to save the day in this saga. It's just like negative option billing on your hydro utility statement - do nothing and in a couple of short years you will be lined up by people in riot gear, demanding to see your National ID - tasers on stun. For god's sake, have you not noticed already the militarization of the police and security forces around the world, no more boys in blue - now we have the black executioner's garb with body armour, and a new motto that goes something like, "To Swerve and Neglect".

Have you not wondered why leaders meet in secret to sign deals affecting your life without any public input. Does it not even cause a tinge of annoyance within you that Canada is allowing troops from another country to tell us we can't assemble peaceably on our own soil? Does it not bug you even a little bit that we have unjust anti-terror laws and no fly lists that abrogate every tenet of democratic law and such hard-won inalienable rights of free individuals? I'm so ashamed when I think about my Muslim brothers and sisters in this world. George and his pals are guilty of a veritable plethora of crimes against humanity, 911 being one of the biggest - THEY did it - and THEY are blaming it on and punishing a race of people who are being vilified, tortured and exterminated because of this horrendous lie. And good old Johnny Q. Public thinks this is just ok - I've heard too many of them say things like, "Oh, those people over there live like animals" or "they don't feel things like us anyway because they are so backward" or "sure, there are going to be a lot of innocent people killed, but that's the price we have to pay to have peace in this world". I'm ashamed at myself that I even listen to such morons - especially having met some incredibly sophisticated and well educated people who were from Afghanistan and Iraq. Ok Johnny - now ask yourself this? In my world I'm connected to every living thing on this planet, especially those hunks of protoplasm "over there" who are demonstrably more like me than a planarian worm, or perhaps let's say, a member of Congress. With a simple thought exercise of transference we could imagine how we might feel if a bomb was dropped on our house and all our family members were incinerated - now stick with me Johnny, I'll just be another minute then you can go back to entertaining yourself or staring blankly at the TV - the question is, do you think that after your life has been inexorably shattered by some folks 90 miles away staring at a radar screen you would agree that somehow this is progress, and your life is so much better than before the murders which just took place? And all this done for your supposed liberation.

"No nation can donate liberation to another nation. Liberation should be achieved in a country by the people themselves" - Malalai Joya, member of the Afghan parliament

Are your actions in accordance with your thoughts? Are these thoughts correct within the circumstance? Is this circumstance as told to you in any way reflective of the truth about our reality? Out of the many history books I've read throughout my life there has always been something that fascinated me, but I failed to understand or fully appreciate until now - I've seen so many characters throughout time who wanted nothing more than an opportunity to live their lives quietly, even inconspicuously - and then some condition would arise into which they are inexorably swept along, and so they end up playing a role on the world stage, and dutifully fulfill their part in history.

No matter what happens, I will know that when I apprehended the truth about 911 and the state of our world, I was not able to sleep at night if I just remained silent. If you don't know about some of the deceit and hypocrisy perpetrated by our own government, I will not ask you to trust and believe me - but there are ample clues everywhere which will allow you to do some research and come to your own conclusions, rather than the lies fed to you through the media. First you have to care enough to look into that central part of your being and manifest some sense of ethos about your very existence on this planet, and your real connection to people "over there". This isn't some sporting event where you take sides and folks shout playful insults at the opposing team - we have far too many of us on this earth who are being killed and subjected to unspeakable horrors every day - like today!

You and I are playing a part in this injustice. Whatsoever we do to anyone else we do to ourselves - whatsoever we allow to be done unjustly to others can also be done to us. What can I do about it? I'm going to keep writing and recording and animating and shouting and hoping and praying - that my children can grow up in this world and know peace - unlike the hundreds that were slaughtered today in order that someone else could make some more money.

What are YOU going to do about it?

If there's no real enemy don't worry - the Department of Homeland Criminals will make a bunch. And that's part of the technique that has been utilized throughout history. The human animal has a natural tendency to get trapped within the amity-enmity complex. You have seen it your whole life - think back to when you were in school and various classmates would gravitate toward one group or another in order to look cool to their friends, or else they risk not being accepted. Other individuals become excluded, marginalized - this provides an in-group and out-group mentality which serves to clearly identify who you are - at least according to the group mind.

In order for this method to work there must be a constant threat, whether it's Communism or terrorism - any outside force to justify the mechanisms of war and population control. If there is no clear and present danger to our society from the outside then it's time to manufacture the enemy from within, one technique is to commit the unspeakable horror of murdering your own people - blame it on others and then take away citizen's rights and freedoms under the guise of protecting them from your manufactured enemy. Control of the media, the courts and the military all ensure that any opinion other than the official line is branded as dissent and sympathy with the identified out-group, in this case terrorists. End result is enslavement - fear - control. It works, but only on the ignorant.

Fear and ignorance are the weapons and the means to accomplish these objectives. Make the people afraid of a perceived threat, keep them ignorant by control of the mainstream media. The forces set to control you at the street level always appear to be so angry - that's because they want you to feel scared, and if you don't bow down to them and instead stand up to their provocation, they can then call you combative or disruptive. Have you noticed that everyone who breaks a law nowadays is called a terrorist - don't pay your taxes and you are financial terrorist, we've got eco-terrorists, parking terrorists, kids that won't go straight to bed are still just hyper-activists.

This fight is really about individualism verses the collective. All the laws being put into place right now are to facilitate the next stage of the plan. Agreements, trade deals, Presidential directives, Kyoto protocols - all of these new laws will enable the globalist UN controllers the means and opportunity to exercise their power over everyone, superseding any local jurisdictions. Watch what happens next as they clamp down on supply and distribution of necessities like food and fuel - raising prices to absurd levels and provoking incredible hardship and civil unrest. Our role as the general public is largely reactive, we are trained to watch and interpret via the media - an event will occur and they will tell us what has happened, what to think about it, and what they are going to do to resolve it - we will follow along and then do whatever they say. We are getting good at this training stuff - taking our shoes off at the airport - waiting in absurd line-ups while they check for boogie-man terrorists among us - allowing ourselves to be questioned and detained. Now they have even made laws taking away the rights of people to voice their opinions - I guess that makes me a dissident because I'm against the war and criticize the government. I suppose we are at the point when a person does not have to actually break a law and aggress upon another individual or their property - it's enough to think the wrong way and get locked up for it, and don't you dare take pictures or videos because the last thing they really want is some incontrovertible evidence of their criminal behavior.

How are we going to fight this New World Order which is steaming ahead with plans for global domination and human enslavement? The power of one is the force that will ultimately win this battle. Every great advancement throughout history is inevitably because of a few individuals and their unique sense of genius.

"The purpose of a fish trap is to catch fish, and when the fish are caught, the trap is forgotten"
- Chuang Tzu

Dr. Antony Sutton was a Fellow at Stanford's Hoover Institute in the 60's when he discovered that the US was supplying the USSR with technology and weapons used against American soldiers in Vietnam. Sutton discovered that Wall Street had sponsored both the Bolshevik Revolution and the rise of Nazi Germany. The books he wrote cost him his career. Sutton promoted the idea that the "left" against "right" concept is false.

"Sooner or later people will wake up. First we have to dump the trap of right and left. This is a Hegelian trap to divide and control. The battle is not between right and left, it is between us and them" - Antony Sutton 1925 - 2002

In the push for globalization, Sutton correctly shows us that on the international stage the left and right political structures are no less fraudulent, and the monopolized monetary system is utilizing a form of authoritarian socialism to manifest a one-world government. The unique aspect of Dr. Sutton's work is that he offers us a solution to this problem - Sutton points out that The Order has numerous weaknesses including a limited world view and generations of inbreeding resulting in psychopaths at the shallow end of the gene pool.

"The movement that will topple The Order will be extremely simple and most effective. It will be ten thousand or a million Americans who come to the conclusion that they don't want the State to be boss, that they prefer to live under the protection of the Constitution" - Antony Sutton

And that concept in my estimation holds the key to how we can fight against the forces of globalization and win back the day for individuals everywhere. Educate yourself first and then all those around you. Don't give them the anger or violence they crave, we are not going to beat them on their terms so we must alter the rules of the engagement. If we try to band together and fight against superior odds and high tech weaponry we will only play into their hands - our strength is the realization of millions of independent thinkers who can influence the cause of freedom from tyranny by affecting change where we ourselves hold the most power - that is through economic influence in our huge numbers - as in general strikes, boycotts of key industries and products, and support for each other at the community level.

There really is a collective consciousness on this earth - it puts forth the idea that we are all free individuals born with inalienable rights and freedoms. Nobody can take advantage of you unless you let them - don't allow anyone to dictate your thoughts. Stand up for yourself and feel that sense of indignation when somebody unjustly detains you, questions you, or tries to bend you over and perform a cavity search. Refuse biometric identification or National ID cards - refuse to be manipulated, let them know we understand the cheap tricks and the gross lies being foisted upon us. Most of all - if you truly want peace, you have to manifest it first within yourself. It is said that everyone has a wonderfully unique story that is their life, it is our job to discover what that story is while we develop those abilities we are blessed with to varying degrees. I'll bet you've got a completely original story to tell, instead of the maliciously contrived opinions you heard on the news last night.

"They will make their own independent decision to thwart The Order and it will take ten thousand or a million forms" - Antony Sutton

I guess I never actually mentioned any pizza joints or Building 7 - you can all thank me later.

9/11 and Rubik's Cube

"When the solution is simple, God is answering"
- Albert Einstein

Life is allegory.

Problem 1: Rubik's Cube, introduced in the early 80's - How to get the cube restored to original state of one colour on each side from any random state of disorder.

Problem 2: Realizing truth and justice regarding 911 and the encroaching New World Order - How to restore some sense of humanity and dignity to our lives in the face of a corrupt system that utilizes deceit, torture and genocide in its campaign of fear to implement a one-world globalist agenda, or non-random state-sponsored disorder.

"Truth is the agreement between knowledge and its object" - Immanuel Kant

When the Rubik's Cube came out years ago I was determined to solve it. I happened upon some people who were attending university and shared an interest in this puzzle. These folks were into math, science and physics, so they brought a level of understanding to the problem I could not imagine on my own - they talked about "group theory" and "algorithms" and they helped me to understand the complexity of the problem at hand. This offered me some avenues of pursuit with which I could at least approach the task, and inevitably this allowed me to work toward a solution.

In the beginning I learned that there were various sequences of moves or "algorithms" which would exchange pairs of elements on the cube while leaving everything else intact. Each side of the cube had only one square that remained constant - the center, which remained fixed in relation to the other center squares - so every time you made a move on one face of the cube it could be recorded. It then became a matter of maneuvering certain squares into positions whereupon you could execute those sequences to perform an exchange. This involved writing out long strings of operations - after which you then performed the algorithm, and then the long sequence of moves could be reversed - thus returning the cube toward a more progressively resolved state.

This method was cumbersome, I remember spending hours and sometimes days twisting and writing, and then exchanging and reversing etc. You were required to tape little pieces of paper on the squares you were dealing with, and it involved incredible patience and perseverance. I eventually got to the point where I could solve the damned thing - it took a long time and many sheets of paper with long strings of data which had to be precisely followed - one wrong move and you were back to square one - literally and figuratively. A couple of short years later they started to publish books on how to solve the Rubik's Cube. These solutions had elegantly simple algorithms reduced to a small number of operations to achieve a desired result. By memorizing these magic formulas one could solve the cube in short order - no sticky tape - no sheets of paper. My best time was 22 seconds. One of the most important lessons I learned through this entire process was that with enough patience and intelligence, there is no issue too tough to resolve. More important, there is always a better and simpler solution available to any problem if you can place your mind into a receptive state of inquiry and awareness.

"When a man who is honestly mistaken hears the truth, he will either quit being mistaken, or he will cease to be honest" - Mark Twain

When the truth about 911 and our corrupt system of government became apparent to me, I was determined to expose and resolve this horrendous situation. At first I was principally concerned with figuring out the fraudulence of the US government's story, and then it led by necessity to an attempt at understanding this tragedy within its greater context. The transformation one makes can result in a 180 degree shift of your mental paradigm, and the end result can make you feel that those of us who understand the truth are now living out of phase with the rest of society.

"The great enemy of the truth is very often not the lie - deliberate, contrived and dishonest - but the myth - persistent, persuasive, and unrealistic"
- John F. Kennedy

Just like my earlier attempts at puzzle solving, at first I set upon the task of approaching 911 truth and justice by myself, and then by trying to seek out the help of others. I thought that if we could build up our strength through large numbers, we could overcome these evil forces and return the system to some humane state of being. This approach I now believe is entirely erroneous because of several reasons; the main one being the fact that these actions are precisely what the authorities expect us to do, and have been preparing for over the last several decades - look at the multi-jurisdictional task forces and the many detention centers already set up. The other problem with this approach is that there is an assumption that the current system is even worth saving in the first place.

"He who gains a victory over other men is strong, but he who gains a victory over himself is all powerful" - Lao Tzu

Just like most other problems in our life, there is a far easier and more effective solution which can achieve the same objective while not endangering anyone to the inherent violence and manipulation of the state. As we are the economic engine that enables those in power to forge our own chains of enslavement - we must cut off the supply of energy to them and thereby cause a collapse of their psychopathic rule. How long could they last if a majority of the people started to boycott key industries and products the corporations are dependent upon for rising profits and funding of war? What do you think would happen if most people stopped using the airlines, or refused to buy new cars and trucks for a while? What government on this planet could survive if there were constantly occurring general strikes, or a mass refusal to pay unjust taxes, or civil disobedience on a national scale? What if everybody turned off the TV and nobody heard the daily lies and manufactured hatred for our brothers and sisters in this world?

"I think it would be a good idea" - Mahatma Ghandi, when asked by a reporter for his opinion of western civilization

There is another philosophical aspect to this direction of thought - there is no point in fighting fear and violence with the same methods used by those set against you - in which case you risk becoming that which you oppose.

"Peace comes from within. Do not seek it without"
- Buddha

If we truly aspire to cultivate a sense of understanding and compassion within our lives - we cannot allow the current suffering and injustice to be inflicted on our fellow human beings. Moreover, if we continue to be so callously indifferent and morally bereft - these same aberrations of humanity will surely come to destroy our lives directly - as to our souls we may already be far too late.

"Who can enjoy enlightenment and remain indifferent to suffering in the world? This is not in keeping with the Way. Only those who increase their service along with their understanding can be called men and women of Tao" - Lao Tzu

William Rodriguez and the Key to 9/11

“First Man In” for Truth

Myself and 100 other people had the good fortune to see William Rodriguez speak in Nanaimo, BC on Sept 17th, 2007. There are many things quite remarkable about this man, his rare sense of integrity being chief among them. I had heard him before on a radio show, it was a fascinating interview where he went into some detail about his youth, his career in magic, and just some of the noteworthy people he has been associated with throughout his extraordinary life so far. Working at the World Trade Center for 20 years, he was one of a small group of people who possessed a master key to the building. That fact, along with his intimate knowledge of this huge complex, permitted firefighters easier access, and therefore more people could be saved. Rodriguez is a humble man who makes references to the fact that he is just a janitor, but in truth, he is a powerful individual with an amazing story to tell. Through his experiences we see revealed a man who possesses incredible loyalty, uncommon bravery, and the strength of his convictions concerning truth and justice.

“Strength is Happiness. Strength is itself victory. In weakness and cowardice there is no happiness. When you wage a struggle, you might win or you might lose. But regardless of the short-term outcome, the very fact of your continuing to struggle is proof of your victory as a human being.”
- Daisaku Ikeda

More than 2 hours sped by all too fast as we heard his first person account of events that occurred at the World Trade Center on 9/11. I was surprised to hear him tell of the many instances where he kept going back into the building to rescue strangers and try and save his friends. Not surprising is the fact that all of his testimony about the bombs going off before the planes hit was omitted from the official 9/11 Commission Report - as a matter of fact there is no mention of William Rodriguez at all, or the many others who would have to be considered prime witnesses in any real investigation.

At one point in his presentation he talks about a specific moment where he asks God for help. William tells us that he was not much of a believer before this moment, but as he was sure that he was going to die just then, he cried out for divine assistance. There were three instances during his lecture where I was literally moved to tears - this was one such moment. Rodriguez has an uncanny ability to engage an audience with his story, it feels as if he is speaking to you directly, and you can feel the pain he still experiences when he closes his eyes and falls silent while describing the 200 friends he lost that day, or the exasperation and hopelessness he felt while trying to save people amid this scenario of confusion and devastation. At that moment when he describes turning toward God for help, I'm reminded of another time in my own life when I turned away.

"With or without religion, you would have good people doing good things and evil people doing evil things. But for good people to do evil things, that takes religion." - Steven Weinberg

I can remember the exact instant I turned away from my Catholic faith - I was enrolled at St. Mike's College in Toronto, a place where some famous NHL stars had been schooled. Most of my teachers were Priests who lived there at the college. I stayed after class one day and asked my teacher who was an elder Priest this question, "If a baby is born and dies 5 minutes later without having been baptized, why can't this child ever get to heaven and must languish in limbo instead? It seems rather unfair to me that our God would punish somebody who is completely innocent of anything, and for all of eternity.” He went on to explain that these were just the rules and sometimes we were not capable as mere mortals of understanding God’s wisdom, it was not our duty to question, we are required to have faith and obey. Well, I didn’t like that answer at all - you see, we were also studying physics, science and math which pointed to some kind of an ordered universe with rules and laws of nature, these studies demanded reason and truth in order to exist. I could not accept that God could be so unfair, or that any religious doctrine would support this type of thought.

“The important thing is to not stop questioning”
- Einstein

I pressed this man of the cloth further with the following, “If a man lives his entire life and is always a good person and a respected member of society, but then 5 minutes before he dies he takes a gun and murders somebody - can this man still get to heaven, and does this one action negate all the good work he has done his entire life?” Now my teacher and my religion were both truly on the spot as far as I was concerned, in my 14 year old mind I felt I had this Priest and the whole Catholic faith on the line and over a barrel for my allegiance. His answers both dismayed and surprised me. He said first that if the man received the sacrament of confession within that last 5 minutes of his life - he could then be absolved and forgiven, and after a suitable length of time in Purgatory would be able to proceed straight to heaven - pass Go and collect the $200. I was shocked and disheartened, this formal religion thing had lost me at that moment - here we have a completely innocent soul who has barely drawn a breath and is denied heaven for all eternity, and then somebody who willfully commits murder who is allowed the grand prize at the end of the tunnel.

But then this teacher of mine said something that I didn't expect, and which has subsequently afforded me a valuable lesson throughout my interesting if not heathen existence on this earth. He said that each of our lives is like a long strand of thread in this huge tapestry - if we live our entire life and help to create a rich and colourful design, then this is not mitigated by the thread becoming frayed and broken toward the end - it does not take away from the beauty of all that has gone before. I suppose I decided right there that his allegory about life's tapestry was correct, but I didn't like his capricious rules concerning player eligibility for heaven and hell. Perhaps heaven and hell were not some mystical places we went after we died, perhaps they exist on this tapestry itself during our time here - we make our own heaven and hell I reasoned, and it's encapsulated in our thought at this very moment. As a result of this exchange I never went to church again, and decided to cultivate my interest in Taoism.

Later in my life I heard this poem, it of course reminded me of that important day in my youth.

Just A Weaver

My life is but a weaving, between my God and me
I do not choose the colors, He worketh steadily
Ofttimes he weaveth sorrow, and I in foolish pride
Forget He sees the upper, and I the underside

Not till the loom is silent, and the shuttles cease to fly
Will God unroll the canvas, and explain the reasons why
The dark threads are as needful, in the skillful weaver's hand
As threads of gold and silver, in the pattern He has planned

by Benjamine Malachi Franklin

More than one road to Maple Leaf Gardens

When I was young my father used to make little drawings when he explained things to us, it was usually a visual diagram containing lines, boxes and circles that would get connected and spill off the page as he spoke. I'll never forget one such lesson, he said that when we went and watched the Maple Leafs play a hockey game live, there were literally thousands of different roads we could take - all leading from our house to Maple Leaf Gardens. He tried to impress upon me the importance of respecting other people's choices in this life. We are all in a sense trying to get to the same arena, and once having arrived at our destination, it matters not what route one takes or how long the journey. Parenthetically speaking, I would later reason that statistically the Leafs had a better than equal chance of losing no matter how the hell I got there.

In our search for truth we can take two different roads, the path of acceptance, or the path of denial. Both lead to the same place as there is only one truth at which to arrive. The path of affirmation, or the via affirmativa, is the positive path, this method requires much effort as one is trying to attain a sense of God through devotion, study and application. The opposite is of course the via negativa, or the negative path. On this road to truth we are required to do absolutely nothing at all - those who choose this method will try and remain in a receptive state, as only your stillness is required. The first path is an accumulation of study and experience, the second requires a stripping away of knowledge to attain an awareness of your inner being, and meditation is valued as a way to allow the divine presence within you to be realized.

In our search for truth regarding 9/11 we can take two distinct roads. The path of affirmation of the official theory means accepting everything we are told by the US government on faith alone. There is no evidence for their claims, but we are not supposed to question - don't ask to see the video evidence they are hiding, the records of testimony from people like William Rodriguez, or all those who received gag orders, etc. On the other side is the 911 Truth movement's path of denial - the essential difference being, we only have to show that the official story could not have happened - we are not required to prove what actually did happen.

“The burden of proof rests upon he who affirms; not he who denies.” - Fundamental rule of evidence

This world of ours is comprised of so many things tied together by a singularity, you can call it Truth, or God, or Tao, or even the “one story” or “uni-verse”. At the center of this universe is a reflection of reality that is manifested through our consciousness - as all points of incongruity swirl about our life, there is a calm truth to be found deep within our own unique sense of being - if you can be still enough and take enough time and effort to unlearn - all that remains is our awareness, or true perception.

“The longer I live the more convinced I become that life is 10 percent what happens to us and 90 percent how we respond to it. I believe the single most significant decision I can make on a day-to-day basis is my choice of attitude. It is more important than my past, my education, my bankroll, my successes or failures, fame or pain, what other people think of me or say about me, my circumstances, or my position. Attitude keeps me going or cripples my progress. It alone fuels my fire or assaults my hope. When my attitudes are right, there is no barrier too high, no valley too deep, no dream too extreme, no challenge too great for me.”
- Charles R. Swindoll

As we were leaving the William Rodriguez presentation my friend asked me, “Do you think the 911 truth movement is making any progress? It doesn’t seem like anything is happening and we don’t seem to be winning this fight for justice.” I proceeded to give my opinion that in my mind we have already won, truth to me does not require X percentage of the populace to be valid - only that realization within one individual.

I believe William Rodriguez when he describes the bombs going off before the planes hit - I don't know why he would make that up, being the kind of person who would continually risk his life to save complete strangers. I suppose he still holds the key to 9/11, both literally and figuratively. On that day he used it to help save people's lives, and today we can use his testimony to help unlock the truth about what happened - or more succinctly, what didn't happen.

Heaven and Hell are truly within our consciousness at this very moment - so is the truth about 9/11. Our lives are not comprised of billions of disparate events - there is a unity that ties everything together, whether you call it Nature, God, or the Way of Tao. That truth is to be found on a personal level by each of us - the place we can find it is the same place it has always been - inside our own consciousness. Our duty, no matter what path we may choose, is to strip away and deny each layer of deception, and then have the courage to look within ourselves and realize and affirm that which is truth.

"There are two paths leading to oneness with the Tao. The first in the path of acceptance. Affirm everyone and everything. Freely extend your goodwill and virtue in every direction, regardless of circumstances. Embrace all things as part of the Harmonious Oneness, and then you will begin to perceive it. The second path is that of denial. Recognize that everything you see and think is a falsehood, an illusion, a veil over the truth. Peel all the veils away, and you will arrive at the Oneness. Though these paths are entirely different, they will deliver you to the same place: spontaneous awareness of the Great Oneness" - Lao Tzu

Ground Zero Logic

Take a Look at this Picture:

This picture was taken shortly after the collapse on 9/11 in NYC. Do you see the 45 degree angle cut on the steel column, and do you see the sulfidised residue around that straight cut. OK, now we must take that information and by necessity draw some very important and inevitable conclusions. These conclusions are binding, you don't get to agree with each successive point and then refute the eventuality, no matter how uncomfortable it may be. That would be like saying ok, I see the straight cut, but now I'm going to tell you I want to pretend it's not there.

According to the official US government theory about 9/11 - an airplane flew into the building 95 floors above, and the jet fuel got so hot that it transferred its energy downward and caused the metal on the support columns to fail synchronously, as well as leaving behind all the tell-tale signs of a controlled demolition charge using thermate, which leaves a sulfidised residue, and is also the only known method of slicing construction grade steel of this strength and volume in this allotted time.

Now, given the fact that jet fuel can only reach a temperature far below that which would be necessary to melt and evaporate steel, as definitely occurred on 9/11 as shown by the following photograph taken at ground zero:

and confirmed by satellite thermographic imagery which shows the pools of molten metal hot spots at thousands of degrees - up to months after the event:

We must therefore conclude that the buildings were brought down by controlled demolition. Especially when you consider that one of the three buildings which fell down at free-fall speed was not even hit by a plane, yet still had the molten metal.

Add to this the compelling evidence given to us from hundreds of first responders and eyewitnesses who heard and saw explosions - as well as the numerous video and audio recordings taken by news teams and others.

People like the hero and WTC worker Frank Selecchia who took this picture of Tower #1 showing the molten steel 2 months later.

Gravity induced collapse due to structural failure?

Do you really believe that?

If you don't accept the obvious conclusion that there were many explosives used to bring down the towers, then you must somehow explain:

- how the jet fuel could slice through steel like in the picture above, 95 floors down from where the plane crashed, and with a residue ONLY at the straight line cut - what you'd expect from a thermite/ thermate reaction.

- where all the explosive energy came from to disintegrate the structural steel and allow the complete collapse of these structures. There is simply no other mechanism that fits the evidence. Look at the dripping metal beams, glowing red hot - now explain it with jet fuel - a physical impossibility - unless you want to disregard the laws of thermodynamics.

- how these buildings fell straight down through the path of most resistance at free-fall speeds. Imagine a flaming arrow hitting a 90 meter tall Douglas Fir tree near the top - and then try and tell me the base of the tree disintegrates into dust as a result.

Add to these facts the media's completely criminal and reprehensible complicity over these subsequent years, and what we have here folks is a full-blown fascist dictatorship - where your government can call you a terrorist for even questioning their fairy tales about 9/11, and then lock you up and torture you without any chance of a fair trial - hell, they even put all that into law.

Even worse - our soldiers are dying in these wars in Iraq and Afghanistan based upon this horrible lie. Not to mention the one million dead Iraqis, and the millions of displaced and shattered lives in both those countries. How about the current threats to start the next war with Iran - how much proof do you need?

- rigged elections
- repeal of Habeas Corpus
- Patriot Act

- Department of Homeland Criminals
- legalized torture
- Military Commissions Act
- signing statements
- criminalization of dissent
- no fly lists
- detention centers

How can this be happening? - it's happening because of the corruption which has overtaken the government. It's happening because the 5 corporations who control ALL of the mainstream media are owned by the same people who make the machinery and the bombs of war, it is in their financial interest to keep us in a state of perpetual conflict and confusion at the expense of our freedom, our rights as individuals, and any sense of dignity as human beings.

Now, if you still don't understand that it had to be controlled demolition then go back to the first picture and go through it all a bit slower this time, and each time, until you get it.

9/11 was carried out by elements within the US government

The war on terror is a hoax

No Al Qaeda

Just Lies

Hatred

Fear

The facts about 9/11 and the immutable physical laws of nature will not be altered - only your capacity for critical thought.

Naomi or Noam Am I

Not sure if that's a clue for a cryptic crossword, or I'm about to tell you a story.

I went to see Naomi Klein a few nights ago here in Victoria BC Canada. She was finishing up a book tour for her recently released "The Shock Doctrine: The Rise of Disaster Capitalism" before heading abroad for the next stage of her promotional tour. In this excellent book Klein exposes how catastrophic events become extremely profitable for corporations while enabling governments to further an agenda of "disaster capitalism". As a speaker she brings together an aspect that at once encompasses her excellent research abilities while showing a personal warmth that enhances the impact of her arguments. I found her to be both very informative and engaging with the audience. She took a few questions afterwards and it was then I found myself questioning some of her views. The second speaker up to the microphone was a gentleman here in Victoria whom I happen to know named Hal Sisson.

Let me tell you something about Hal Sisson. This man is a noted author with 10 books published, he is a life-long social activist, spent 40 years as a lawyer, he's been a stand-up comic, and a few other vestments and layers I've yet to delve into. He's also 86 years old and a rare sort of individual who retains a sharp mental faculty despite their age. Most times I'm with him I forget that this icon is almost twice as old as myself. I'm heartened to think that it is possible for some of us to keep it so together despite the ravages of time, but usually it's about then I lose my thought and start looking for my keys only to find them in my own pocket. Hal is also a prominent member of the Victoria 9/11 Truth organization - amongst my friends in this group we share a quiet reverence for this man, as well as an appreciation for being able to benefit from his wisdom and experience.

Hal Sisson's question was, "In view of your remarks relating to events which create economic emergencies and subsequent capitalistic opportunities and predations - disaster capitalism - do you have any comment or opinion in regard to the fact that many of them may well be covert false-flag operations by rogue elements of western government or intelligence agencies - events such as 9/11, the Gulf of Tonkin or the Madrid and British bombings?"

This was exactly what I kept thinking about all evening while she described events like Katrina, the tsunami that devastated the coasts of Southeast Asia, or the fires in Greece. In many instances governments will clearly manipulate people's misfortune to push through repressive laws and gross examples of economic opportunism after such events, but I was also interested in her thoughts on how some of these events are purposely created within the Hegelian dialectic. Although she is clearly willing to unveil post 9/11 misdeeds such as the out-sourcing of war operations to Halliburton and Blackwater, it is the event itself and the forces behind it to which Hal Sisson's interrogative bespeaks. Her answer started out all right - she said, "First of all, I'm not so sure I would put anything past these people. It's just that with these conspiracy theories I feel that we're taking away all this energy that could be going toward other issues that are so important right now". Alarm bells started ringing in my head, I immediately thought to myself "female Chomsky". I've actually seen and read interviews where Noam Chomsky comes right out and says, "It's not important who is behind 9/11, there are so many other things these people are guilty of...other things are more important." or "it's just an Internet thing". Sorry Noam - I believe it is THE most important thing. My blood boils every day when I read a news piece about the War of Terror or anything to do with the Department of Homeland Criminals, or especially the frequent reports about another one or two hundred Iraqis dead or wounded.

You have the unmitigated gall to insinuate that it is not important when our own soldiers are giving their lives away based on this horrible lie? I'm sickened to think that some people can be so callously indifferent or morally bankrupt not to connect the obvious dots in this situation. Moreover, why should it be such a mental stretch for anyone to even imagine that the US government was complicit in 9/11 when we have so much declassified material showing their guilt in perpetrating such acts. That's why Hal Sisson's question is so relevant - because we know as a matter of historical fact that the Gulf of Tonkin and many others were false-flag operations, self-inflicted wounds - we know they are more than capable of it and it is a technique used by military powers since ancient times. This is not some ludicrous idea, and to pull out the old utility-knife catch phrase "conspiracy theory" and smear anybody who questions the official doctrine is not only offensive - it represents the shoddiest form of logic I can imagine.

"Condemnation without investigation is the height of ignorance" - Einstein

You should have heard the crowd at that precise moment. As soon as she said "conspiracy theories" there was a murmur of disapproval toward the questioner, it was like a bunch of trained monkeys who stand up all at once when the buzzer goes off - and when she wrapped all of us independently thinking individuals into a neat ball and drop-kicked us in the gonads with the following summation, "It's just that with these conspiracy theories I feel that we're taking away all this energy that could be going toward other issues that are so important right now" - the audience burst into applause. The mood was something like, "There, that should put to rest you 9/11 truth idiots, way to go Naomi - we are cognitively dissonant en masse". I was crestfallen at that moment when I saw first hand the results of some studies that show greater than 80% of the public are too apathetic and will just as soon swallow up the government's propaganda as think for themselves. Sure, we've got our Naomi Kleins and Noam Chomskys to stand just a little on one side of the gate while many followers believe they lead the vanguard against the controllers - but no way will they go that extra step and take a peek over that wall. I'm not saying she is employed by them or even necessarily conscious of it - perhaps within her own paradigm she resembles many who just can't imagine our leaders murdering some of us on purpose to further their agenda, and yet that's what war is all about. That's the part that is puzzling - she has no trouble expounding on the methodologies of torture and crisis manipulation by these people, but her natural curiosity and professional assiduousness stop short at the root causes of 9/11. Maybe she feels that if she touches that truth her days flying about doing book tours are over.

Naomi's worried about how much energy I've got. Little does she know I'm a seething mass of thermo-nuclear potential. I've got enough in me to listen to her build her arguments, present her thorough research, and draw together elements for her theories. And whoa - look at that, I've still got plenty left over to examine the various aspects of 9/11 - who da thunk? As well, since when is it up to you to decide what subject is deserving of my energy? How would you feel if someone just wrote off your entire theory by smearing it with a brush and saying, "it's just not important"?

Sorry Naomi, I'm disappointed - I still think you are great author with important, well presented information that everyone should be made aware of, but your inability to step over that line and deal with 9/11 is problematic to myself and others - this is precisely the difficulty we face when it comes to the wider population's suspension of disbelief regarding this issue. The reaction of that audience demonstrates so poignantly the struggle we face in bringing forth the truth about 9/11. Thanks for not tasing Hal.

9/11 And Other Optical Illusions

There's a wonderful optical illusion which involves a graphic of a ballerina spinning around on one leg. It's called:

"The Spinning Silhouette Optical Illusion"

Animated graphic viewable at Maniac World

This illusion elucidates a very important principle concerning subjective reality, and helps to illustrate a point about the vastly differing views people can hold about events such as 9/11. Some people who look at the spinning figure will first affirm that she is bouncing on her left leg while twirling in a clockwise direction. Others may avow that she is instead bouncing on her right leg and spinning in a counterclockwise direction. Indeed, you can have a few people looking at this animated graphic at the same time and not agree as to what is happening. This idea is not really foreign to many people who have made the journey from one belief about 9/11 to its diametrical opposite.

First - we must try and deconstruct the illusion and find out what is going on. When you look at a silhouette of a figure it is not possible to determine if it is facing you, or facing away from you. There is no depth to the figure, it's just an outline - our Left/Right designation of what we visually perceive will set the stage for our belief of what follows. If the human cut-out is interpreted to be facing you then you will assume it is her left foot touching the ground, and vice versa if not. The information is not sufficient when viewing a black and white silhouette, our brain makes an assumption at first glance and then proceeds toward a logical eventuality based upon that assumption.

When you first look at the optical illusion you are subjected to your own implied interpretation. It's interesting to analyze our mindset while going through the entire process of discovery in figuring out this type of problem. I looked at it initially and told myself to concentrate on which leg she is bouncing on - I was sure it was the left, how could anyone doubt it - you can see it, can't you? You would have to be an idiot to think otherwise - anybody who does not see it must be a lunatic. But then something happens, there is a period of thought and analysis, and then a question of our belief. As we catch ourselves seeing the right leg touching and the figure rotating in the opposite direction, there arises doubt concerning our convictions. We come to the ultimate realization that we can be fooled, and it is embarrassing to admit that those assertions we would stake our lives upon, and the derision we feel toward those who do not agree with us, are after all only based upon an illusion.

"When you change the way you look at things - the things you look at change" - Wayne Dyer

It's just a trick - now I can look at the spinning figure and see it going either way - usually by focusing my attention below the dancer upon the movement of the shadow - yes, it's her left leg touching the ground while going clockwise, and yes it is also her right leg touching and she's going in the opposite direction. This understanding of the illusion cannot be achieved until we take the time to study it, as well as our part in viewing it. The key is an awareness of ourselves as witness to illusion that passes for reality, followed by a willingness to discover the nature of the phenomenon. One must in a sense step outside of oneself and watch the watcher. Now I'm ashamed that I could be so sure it was her left leg touching and everyone who disagreed must be stupid, moronic, unpatriotic, knees painted purple, whatever. If we do not take the time to study and understand the trick we will forever be stuck inside this reactive mindset that is subject to misdirection or assumption. Any guesses where I'm going with this?

Years went by and I believed it was the planes hitting the towers of the World Trade Center which caused them to fall. It's simple isn't it? It was those radical Muslim guys, wasn't it? And we should be afraid of them and hate them shouldn't we? NO - it's a lie. If you still believe these things it is because you have not educated yourself about the event and have based your opinions entirely upon what you've been told. Optical illusions are fun, and when we discover the trick we can understand that it is only a matter of subjective reality - both realities being true depending on how you look at it. It is not the same thing as a real world event like 9/11. Now we must look at physical objects and dynamic processes, and more to the point, we must consider the fact that thousands of people were mass-murdered on that day. Then we made war in Afghanistan and Iraq, then a few million more were killed and displaced, now we've got innocent people being tortured, shoes off at the airport, Department of Homeland Criminals . . . we could go on here for a bit. You owe it to yourself and your country to find out if there is any shred of evidence to support the assertions made by the 9/11 truth movement. This is much more than a mental exercise where we can train ourselves to believe both realities depending on interpretation. There is only one reality about 9/11 - yet we have two diametrically opposite belief systems about what happened. I'm telling you that if you still believe the official "conspiracy theory" about this tragedy, it is because you have not taken the time to educate yourself and study the event and realize the trickery being foisted upon you by the US government. Ask yourself how you would react if you found out that they were truly responsible, ask what you could do about it when the mainstream media is controlled by the same people involved, as is the Congress, the military, the courts.

"The individual is handicapped by coming face to face with a conspiracy so monstrous he cannot believe it exists" - J. Edgar Hoover

Jet fuel can't melt structural steel, molten metal does not appear unless there is sufficient explosive energy involved. Free fall speed cannot be achieved unless sufficient mass is removed as in controlled demolition. NORAD does not stand down unless directed. You do not remove and destroy evidence unless you are guilty of the crime. Gag orders are not issued unless you want the truth suppressed. Video tapes are not withheld unless you are lying. Patriot Acts are not made into laws unless you want to institute a fascist state...we could go on here for quite a while. Look at the answers I get from people when I bring up these points - they tell me I'm a moron, I'm not an engineer, etc. Thanks folks, you explained the melted steel really well with that answer, and you are obviously well-versed in the sciences AND classical literature, and let me help you along with your line of reasoning - I'm also overweight, I'm getting older, balder, blinder, etc. But none of this ad hominem stuff bespeaks to any of the central incongruities being raised. It only illustrates that you are in a certain stage of understanding about the event, and would rather get angry with the messenger instead of dealing with the message, and I'm still standing here trying to explain X. I've been in your spot and I've felt the same anger, I've looked at myself carrying erroneous baggage contrived by others to provoke me towards hatred, and I can understand the indignation of people who are disgusted at the 9/11 truth movement. Once, I felt exactly the same way they do. Until we receive factual information about what's going on, our first response is always going to be hostility against anyone who can't plainly see the spinning ballerina so obviously bouncing on her left leg going clockwise. That is the critical difference between myself then and now - information.

"Strange times are these in which we live when old and young are taught in falsehoods school. And the one man that dares to tell the truth is called at once a lunatic and fool" - Plato

I went to pick up my child from school the other day, and while waiting outside the classroom I looked at a big mural put together by the students. This bed sheet sized piece of folk art displayed a person's head in the middle, with all these circles around it containing one word messages like hope, understanding, curiosity, character. Inside the graphic head which occupied the centre were similar messages and aphorisms, obviously representing the dynamic of learning, growth and development, and all presented in the most positive and uplifting way. When my children were born I was awestruck with the miracle of creation and the sanctity of life. What happens to us? Why can I not feel that sense of wonder when considering most of the adults in this world? Moreover, if that mural in the school is really indicative of our society's values and its hopes for our young - why do we witness so much deceit and corruption by our political leaders and governmental institutions. Obviously, there is a lot that happens to us between that state of being newborn and becoming an adult.

"The moment a baby is born a collective effort is made to chain him to servile dependency on various beliefs. This is all the educational systems have ever done, and yet they say their aim is to liberate man. But what really happens is that a shrewd and subtle mental slavery slowly overtakes the mind of the individual. This system does not teach people how to think, it simply pumps them full of beliefs. It does not encourage doubt, it does not allow rebellion, and the products of such an educational system are usually unable to think for themselves" - osho

The ability to think for yourself is of paramount importance in this survival game. If you allow your opinions to be formed by society through the media, you will inexorably be led down a path of moral contradiction and unconscious collusion. Everybody I know who is "switched on" about the current situation has shut off their TV a long time ago. When you unplug yourself from the daily lies and misdirection there unfolds new possibilities for awareness - when you change the things you look at, you begin to redefine what is actually important and relevant in your life. It's a funny thing - when it comes to our personal computers we all have anti-virus programs as well as various other utilities for filtering out the steady barrage of trojans, worms, spyware and everything else that is constantly being thrown at us. We realize the importance of protecting ourselves from the harmful elements that might corrupt our personal computer - but what about our brain? What about the constant bombardment of garbage we are inundated with on a daily basis through network news, advertising, sitcoms and infotainment? One of the most significant things you can do to start the detoxification process in your life is to shut the TV off. Talk to a real person, read a book, go somewhere, build something, experience through your own senses instead of sitting there for hours at a time entertaining yourself in front of the CIA controlled electronic brain manipulator.

"Many persons have a wrong idea of what constitutes true happiness. It is not attained through self-gratification but through fidelity to a worthy purpose" - Helen Keller

There's something else that unifies many people I know within the 9/11 Truth movement. That is an awareness of a bigger reality of which 9/11 is only a part. Once you start down that road of inquiry and discovery it is truly a bumpy ride - layer upon layer of deceit and manipulation unfold until every precept we may have once held about our society and our role in it gets called into question. You begin to see a different side to many issues - it's like your new-found ability to look at the spinning ballerina both ways and understand that it is but a contrivance. You realize that certain people will purposefully manipulate the information we receive toward an agenda, only instead of being hidden, it is so blatantly obvious to you now.

The frog who lived in a well thought that his entire world consisted of the well, himself, and the portion of the sky that he was able to see from the bottom of his home. The frog bragged and felt very proud of his home in the well - the walls, the water, the mud and all of the lowly creatures it ruled over. One day, a sparrow flew down to the well and greeted the frog. The frog boasted to the sparrow of its grand kingdom. The sparrow looked down into the well and laughed. Then she told the frog about the sky, the earth and the vast span of water. She described the miles upon miles of deserts, the lush grasslands and endless mountains. After listening to these words, the frog in the well was shocked into realization of the things he was willing to see and hear in his own small world - Ancient parable

These malevolent forces that have set upon their task of controlling humanity have always been with us. As we widen the circle of our understanding through education and awareness, the circumference of darkness also increases as we begin to imagine what we do not know, but so does the sense of fulfillment in our lives as we engage our environment and affect change toward a more dignified realization of our humanity. I haven't met one person yet who is sorry they embarked upon that journey.

I become what I might be”*

Mental Blocks And 9/11: Analogize This

One of the most interesting videos I've seen on YouTube is a news piece called:

Building Stonehenge - This Man can Move Anything

Picture from Wally Wallington's Forgotten Technology Official Website

About the video - Wally Wallington has demonstrated that he can lift a Stonehenge-sized pillar weighing 22,000 lbs and moved a barn over 300 ft. What makes this so special is that he does it using only himself, gravity, and his incredible ingenuity.

If you take six minutes to watch this video, you will see Wally demonstrate how he moves these gigantic blocks of stone without the aid of machinery. Using simple principles involving levers, gravity, buckets of sand, and his resourcefulness - he is able to manipulate these huge objects and replicate such monolithic structures as found at Stonehenge or in Egyptian style obelisks. In one segment he demonstrates his technique for moving a block of stone weighing over a ton by tilting it with wooden boards, and then placing a few pebbles underneath so he can rotate this massive object and thereby position it quite easily.

Aside from the simple genius of this man's method, I believe there is an important allegorical message inherent to this approach. When you can determine the point of incongruity in an argument, it is analogous to finding a tiny pebble - which, if placed correctly, will enable one man to move a mountain - or one idea to change the world. Knowing exactly where to place the pebble, or finding the point of balance where the weight of an argument will determine the direction of thought, we can affect change with only the slightest use of force in relation to the magnitude of the problem.

"Give me a lever long enough, and a place on which to rest it, and I will move the world"

- Archimedes

Just as Wally has demonstrated so vividly in physical terms - as he could have brought in a huge piece of machinery to move such a block, or just a pebble placed at the right spot with just one man pushing a small load, thereby accomplishing the same task. The weight of the object or the severity of the problem is irrelevant - the most important elements being correct intellectual analysis and measurement, determining point of fulcrum and leverage, and application of minimal force to achieve the desired result.

History is replete with stories of people facing incredible odds, but succeeding in the end because of determination, belief in themselves and the righteousness of their cause - as well as the ability to place a small pebble of an idea correctly into the massive machinery of injustice. Today we are faced with audacious examples of the government's mendacity and outright disregard for human rights - so it is easy to find many spots to place our pebbles - here's one:

The entire National Security doctrine is predicated on the existence of Al Qaeda. The history of this organization is inexorably tied to the CIA since the Soviet-Afghan war - although we of course will never hear about any of these facts through the propaganda machine known as the mainstream media. The US intelligence community created Al Qaeda, nurtured it, and is now utilizing it as a central proposition for their "war on terror". Even among most of the dissenters of the current administration, the tendency to blame our protectors for security failures which allows terrorism to thrive is in itself a ruse - if you demonize the government for ineptitude you still buy into their myth and central premise as to the existence of Al Qaeda. Once you apprehend the basic fraudulence of the US government's claims about this mythical organization and their omnipresent threat to the world - the entire "war of terror" unravels and we can clearly see it as a system of lies, hatred and fear promulgated to benefit a small, malevolent group of psychopaths.

"The whole aim of practical politics is to keep the populace alarmed, and hence clamorous to be led to safety, by menacing it with an endless series of hobgoblins, all of them imaginary." - H.L. Mencken

There is no Al Qaeda without the CIA, that's what makes it so horrendous as they torture people into confessing their ties to this organization, when in reality the ones doing the accusing are actually the terrorists in question. That's why the Department of Homeland Criminals is not a legitimate entity, they are no better than a bunch of mafia gangsters - correction, they are MUCH better than any organized crime syndicate because they have managed to establish themselves as part of government while most of us are transfixed on how well America can dance.

"The 'Criminalization of the State', is when war criminals legitimately occupy positions of authority, which enable them to decide 'who are the criminals', when in fact they are the criminals"
- Michel Chossudovsky

How about another spot where we can place a pebble - one of the most obvious being the ludicrous and asinine statement, "we can't show you the evidence because it's a matter of National Security". Despite the many cameras at the Pentagon, we are only presented with 5 frames that show us absolutely nothing. Apparently it's a matter of "National Security" that we are not allowed to see an airplane that would support the government's claims. Anyone who went to trial and declared, "We have evidence, but we can't show it to you" would be laughed out of court. Let's think about it - what do you suppose would happen if we saw a video of a commercial airline slamming into the Pentagon - I guess most of us would grab a butcher knife and run down to City Hall while setting ourselves on fire. Exactly how is "National Security" compromised by citizens looking at any evidence in this case? Here's the answer - if they show us the videos we will all see that they are lying and there is no plane. It is their security that is in jeopardy here, not that of the nation. The same goes for suppressing the mountain of evidence for the controlled demolition of the World Trade Center towers in their bogus investigation. How about the many videos at the airport - they could shut us up in 2 seconds flat by showing just one video of the "terrorists" with the other passengers. There's the guy - see him, he's buying a double latte coffee and doing the crossword before getting on the plane. Oops, don't spill that hot drink onto your seat there, Mohamed, the frame on that vibrating recliner might crumble from the intense heat.

"History will have to record that the greatest tragedy of this period of social transformation was not the strident clamor of the bad people, but the appalling silence of the good people."

- Martin Luther King, Jr.

There are many more points of leverage where we can place our allegorical pebbles - we just have to look at the giant brown stain on humanity known as the mainstream media for many glaring examples of intellectual inconsistency. Polls taken in the last few years show hundreds of millions of people who doubt the US government's fairy tale story about 9/11. How is this fact by itself not a major news item? The media's silence and complicity in this matter, and many others concerning 9/11, and the subsequent wars are a huge smoking gun. However, within the context of their role as a propaganda tool of this regime, it is no longer such a mystery. I still hear people naively ask, "If what you say about 9/11 is true, then why is it not all over the media?" The answer is simple. You are starting from the proposition that these networks which are owned by the same corporations that have military industrial ties, are somehow genuine and unbiased news entities that want to inform the public in an impartial way, while nothing could be further from the truth. The media's part in the cover-up is tantamount to a crime even greater than the one which occurred on 9/11 because it facilitates all the subsequent horrors based on a fallacious premise. It's one thing to be ignorant of the truth, but to be kept in the dark on purpose is an offense more egregious than all others.

The Parable of the Sheep

There was a magician who was also a shepherd. He had thousands of sheep to look after and he was a very miserly man, so he didn't want to pay anybody and he did not want his sheep to be lost or taken by the wolves. So he played a trick on the sheep. He hypnotized them and told every sheep, "You are not a sheep. Don't be afraid." To some he said, "You are a lion." To some he said, "You are tigers." To some he even said, "You are men. Nobody is going to kill you. Don't be afraid and don't try to escape from here."

The sheep started believing in his hypnosis. Every day he would butcher a few sheep but the others would think, "We are not sheep. He is butchering only sheep. We are lions, we are tigers, we are wolves, we are this and that...", even that they were men. And they believed it. It was always some sheep which was to be butchered. They remained aloof, distant. They were not worried. And by and by they were all slaughtered. - George Gurdjieff

Those people "over there" in Iraq and Afghanistan who get butchered today are no different than those unfortunate souls who were murdered on the day of 9/11, or anyone else whose life is sacrificed for the cause of war. It is a fact that every war serves to consolidate the assets of the ruling elite, this is as true today as when the New York and London bankers financed the Bolshevik Revolution or Hitler's Nazi party in WWII. It takes a long time and a huge amount of money to plan and wage a war - these folks want a return on their investment, and the common people are always the ones who end up paying through taxes and blood. I wish I could reach back through time and tell my ancestors not to pick up that gun, that all such conflicts are based on deceit and manipulation of both sides by a ruling class on top. If you stand there wearing a costume and holding a weapon, you might be hypnotized into believing these lofty ideals about duty, honour, justice and peace. The reality is that you are being used to kill others so a select few can grow rich and gain more power. If somebody took an automatic weapon and started murdering your neighbours you might kick up a fuss - but when it happens "over there" and they put on a uniform, then it's supposed to be okay. In fact, you should be proud on behalf of your country.

Until we wake up to the incongruity of thought in this situation we will play a vital role which enables its continuance. It is entirely possible to stop the machinery of war and change this path toward human destruction. The enormity of this task may seem daunting when you consider what it might take to move this gigantic block of oppression and injustice that is pressing down on our world, or it could be as easy as changing your mind and picking up a pebble.

"The key to growth is the introduction of higher dimensions of consciousness into our awareness"

Turns Out My Dog Is A Terrorist Too

Just walking my dog along the streets downtown this morning - there was a guy who didn't put his car close enough to the curb, he's a parking terrorist. The hot-dog vendor didn't make correct change - financial terrorist. This guy over here was thinking about getting a few friends together and smoking some marijuana while watching a movie - narco-terrorists. Now, that guy over there just returned from a tour of duty in Iraq - he did his part to bring freedom to those people who were suffering under a brutal dictator. Too bad they can't enjoy the benefits of their new found democracy - being dead and all. Egad, I almost called him a terrorist too, better tell the cops to go bust those folks getting high, or else we might lose track of the real criminals around here.

Another strange thing about all the terrorists among us - most of us don't even know about our criminality until we get to the airport - then it's all right for the authorities to do whatever they want to us. Imagine that, thinking we can travel around freely as if we had rights. Oh well, back to our stroll downtown.

Must think good thoughts, only good thoughts about our leader, gotta make sure I don't commit any thought crimes - now I can be a criminal for just thinking about stuff. I remember the old days when you actually had to commit some act of aggression on somebody or their property in order to be guilty of a crime - it's so much easier now that people can be arrested for just thinking, and it saves time as well. Good thoughts, must think only good thoughts about our leader. The leader is good, our leader knows best. Oh, this is so hard - I started to think about what a brainless idiot our leader is - oops, better head down to the police station - maybe if they aren't too busy they can zap me with 50,000 volts of electricity - Zzzzt Tzzzt Zzzzt - ah, there, that's better - no more thoughts about idiots, politicians or the negligible lines of distinction therein.

Came home from work yesterday and found my dog taking a dump and getting sick all over last week's newspaper - the front page no less, which contained a picture of the Congress about to pass another one of the leader's great new laws - this one makes it illegal for anybody to wrap a towel around their head after getting out of the shower. Now the image of these Senators is completely smeared with dog poop and vomit - how can we tell the difference between the original photo and Rover's latest addition to their vestments of honour? Better take my dog down to the Homeland Buffoonery Animal Re-Education Center for Excellence - Second Floor, Department of Congress Canine Excrement Differentiation & Detection - you know, the HBARCEDCCEDD for short. Good thing they were recently awarded 8 billion dollars to expand their facility in this vital area. Turns out that if your pet is stricken with this type of affliction, the situation can be corrected by placing said animal in front of the TV while turning up the volume on CNN News. As long as the sound of your pet throwing up is sufficiently drowned out by the yelping, vomiting sounds of Glenn Beck nobody will know the difference - sorry to associate such a foul, disgusting image with all those innocent puking dogs out there.

Over to Fox News where there is a special edition of a new show called, "NeoCon Nightly" featuring Bill O'Reilly and Ann Coulter on the mouth organ - they're going to try some naked ballroom dancing to the tortured strains of Bill Maher's new comedy classic, "No Brains, No Balls, But I Get To Keep My Show". It's a cavalcade of stars I tells ya, a veritable "cunning array of stunts".

Good thoughts only, must think only good thoughts about the leader and our country - Ah Screw it - this is way too hard, forget the whole thing and drag me away to the FEMA camp, I give up. Perhaps I'm better off with the other 300 million terrorists in this god-forsaken country - besides, it's Wednesday and tonight at the camp we're going to pour lighter-fluid on top of the cast iron stove, grab a match and watch that sucker melt to the ground.

"Our society is run by insane people for insane objectives. I think we're being run by maniacs for maniacal ends and I think I'm liable to be put away as insane for expressing that. That's what's insane about it" - John Lennon

New World Disorder: Patterns Of Psychopathy And Other Fractal Anomalies

"If you do not change direction, you may end up where you are heading." - Lao Tzu

Patterns are all around us, in us, and part of every dynamic process that defines our behaviour and the world in which we live. They can be beautiful to look at, such as the microscopic view of a crystal, or they can be disturbing, like the image of prisoners lined up in orthogonal rows at a death camp. In this essay I'd like to talk about some patterns that exist both as the highest and lowest examples of man's creativity and ingenuity. On the one hand we can explore some fascinating iterations of our intellectual capacity through mathematical algorithms that bring forth intricately beautiful graphic images. As well, we can look at a darker side to human artfulness in our ability to arrange patterns of behaviour for power and greed. If we are to survive the current changes being wrought upon our world, we must first identify and understand those systems of control set to manipulate us, only then can we realize our own potential in charting a course that is truly and freely our own.

"Clouds are not spheres, mountains are not cones, coastlines are not circles, and bark is not smooth, nor does lightning travel in a straight line."
- Benoit Mandelbrot, 1983

Image created using Fractal Explorer 2.02

fractal n. A geometric pattern that is repeated at various scales to produce irregular shapes and surfaces that cannot be represented by classical geometry. A fractal has a fragmented geometric shape that can be subdivided in parts, each of which is approximately a reduced-size, self-similar copy of the whole. Fractals are used to model irregular patterns and structures in nature.

Benoit Mandelbrot was a mathematician who coined the word "fractal" in the early 1980s. At its simplest definition, a fractal is any quantity or pattern that displays self-similarity and reveals greater complexity as it is enlarged. The graphical representation of a fractal illustrates the idea of "worlds within worlds" or "self iteration", concepts that are innate to most Western cultures. Fractals are generated from what is known as a "positive feedback loop". Data, or something else like physical matter, goes in one "end," undergoes a modification, and comes out the other. Fractals are produced when the output is repeatedly fed back into the system as input again and again. These models demonstrate to us how a simply defined instruction set can generate intricate and elaborate patterns. We see these types of formations in the natural world, and in the realm of human behaviour.

"The process of creation is the same in art and nature." - Wassily Kandinsky Traditional geometric patterns appear simpler the more they are magnified, reducing in complexity to a straight line as you draw closer. Fractals, on the other hand, reveal greater complexity and detail when magnified, like the bifurcations of a lightning bolt or the variegated surface area on a piece of broccoli. The standard example used for explaining fractals is the Coastline Paradox. If we measure the length of a coastline with a mile-long ruler, we will get one number. If we use a yardstick, we will get a larger value, because a yardstick can more accurately map the convoluted boundary of such a natural shape. As the scale of measurement decreases, the considered length increases without limit. Therefore, as the instrument of measurement approaches zero in its length, the estimated length of the coastline approaches infinity. This irregularity of the object being measured is characteristic of fractal curves and surfaces. Any section of a self-similar fractal curve when magnified in scale, will appear identical to the entire curve in question. This repetition of pattern is found everywhere in nature and is revealed in the organic growth patterns of seashells, vegetation, and many other examples which illustrate the principle of self-similarity, especially genetics.

Primary Patterns

Each child is born into our culture as a blank slate, and in that helpless state of dependency our egos are molded and shaped by society from the very beginning to believe that we are the centre of the universe. This pattern is set within the first few years of a person's life. Born out of a parent's love, then nurtured and manipulated through an education system, along with the mentally crippling effects of controlled indoctrination through television, we grow up believing we are the best. Once outside the family circle we will naturally come up against a multitude of others who are also trained to think the same thing. Indeed, they too have a very egocentric view of the world and believe themselves to be most important. There will be competition, fights, and a lifelong struggle to prove we are better than the rest. Everybody is trying to dominate, to outshine everyone else and prove that they alone are the focal point of all creation. Wealth and power are the signs of success, and in the adult world skewed by moral relativism, all means - lies, hypocrisy, deceit, pretension, anything it takes to be on top and be better off than the next guy - are employed to win the prize.

psy·chop·a·thy –noun, plural -thies. a mental disorder in which an individual manifests amoral and antisocial behavior, extreme egocentricity, lack of ability to love or establish meaningful personal relationships, failure to learn from experience, etc.

Patterns of behaviour are instilled from an early age. Education has become another system of societal control. Much like health and law enforcement, it started out being a service but has turned into an authority. Eventually every level of government will be standardized according to mandated directives from the United Nations. My 6 year old daughter showed me her new ID card from the Elementary school. It has a bar-code, her picture, and some other information encrypted on it as well. Now, why would a 6 year old need an ID card at school? The truth is, they don't - but it is one tiny bit of social conditioning along with thousands of others designed to get the next generation accustomed to the idea of being identified and controlled - always under the guise of safety or some other perceived social benefit. In reality, it is to train people for how they will be required to live in this brave new world. You can't get into these areas or access these special privileges without this card, or without that biometric identifier, or this new brain-chip.

"All active tyrants and oppressors holding the reins of administration feel their existence endangered if men develop their faculty of thinking. There is a possibility of revolution in all successful quests after Truth. The so-called organized societies, religions, and kingdoms have their edifices founded on untruths. Hence? A collective effort is made the moment a baby is born to fetter him in bondage and make him dependent on beliefs. All types of educational systems so far have been doing only this. The avowed aim of education is to liberate man. But actually what is achieved is this. In the mind of the individual, restraints of subtle mental slavery are shrewdly infused. The system does not impart thinking but it inculcates beliefs. Since it does not encourage doubts and revolts, the products of such a system of education are usually incompetent to think independently." - osho

And the training continues throughout our entire life. You can't get the sale price without the store's special membership card. You can't be a good citizen and fight the drunk drivers without giving up your rights. You can't fight the drug war without suspending logic. You can't fight the terrorists without believing in lies. There is always a sacrifice where some piece of your individuality and personal integrity is given up to achieve a desired result, and it's always for the greater good. Or else. I used to think that as long as I didn't bother anybody I could just live my life happily and let all the politicians say and do whatever they wanted in order to satisfy their narcissistic power hungry egos. In that happy little arrangement of a life, I could close myself off from the rest of the world and not care what was going on outside my immediate sphere.

Of course, I couldn't see that I was being manipulated into living an unconscious existence, cut off from the rest of the world, placated into a dull, senseless state where I didn't have an ounce of empathy for my own kind. Think about it; if you don't care what happens to somebody else, then this trait falls into the category of psychopathy. What makes you think that somebody else is going to care about your rights when the wave of oppression drifts up to your door?

Worlds Within Worlds

Perhaps you have seen an ornamental design known as the Chinese Puzzle Ball. These intricately carved spheres contain a number of smaller, freely moving orbs enclosing each other in concentric circles. This ornament contains great symbolism for different concepts like the eternal circle of life, four layers for the compass points or natural elements, yin and yang, etc. Imagine each of our own perceived realities as being a point on one of those spheres. We move independently, believing that we occupy a place on the outermost circle, just like we believe that everything in our life happens spontaneously and in real time. Each floating sphere is a different perception, a unique consciousness that believes itself to be the centre and on top, until it becomes aware of another layer. You ultimately come to the realization that this is just a contrived reality. Now you see the pattern. It's your own sphere, spinning inside a more complex layer which contains and defines the reality you thought was your own.

How does one come to a realization of this contrived reality? We see a consciously directed agenda unfolding everywhere, independent of which political party is in power. We see it written by the Think Tanks and the NGOs. We can study the United Nations and Agenda 21, the writings of the Council on Foreign Relations, the Bilderberg Group, the Club of Rome. We are aware of certain arrangements throughout our whole life which keep repeating, and many things just never seem to make sense. The points of incongruity are all around us at this very moment. We have mercenary armies paid for by the government with our own tax dollars. We have police acting as agents provocateurs trying to incite riot among peacefully assembled citizens. We have the inhumane practice of torture codified into law. We have a campaign of aerial spraying above our very heads for all to see, yet every government will deny existence of the program. We have case after documented case of government led experiments on domestic populations with horrifying and deadly results. We are funding law enforcement agencies who torture people to death with electricity just because they won't answer a question, or because they asked a question, or maybe they are confused and don't speak English and can't understand the question, or maybe because they just refuse to move their car. We are supporting the systematic genocide of our brothers and sisters "over there" in Iraq and Afghanistan. It doesn't matter how you equivocate in your own mind that it's okay; that they live like animals, they mistreat women, they don't worship our god, they don't like soft-boiled eggs on Tuesday, whatever. It's not okay. It's just plain murder. These patterns we live day to day are supporting all manner of atrocities. The trick is that we are made to believe that the sphere we occupy is real and good. We get so absorbed looking at the marvelous intricacies and endless diversions of culture, art, and entertainment, that we don't see the layers on top that are just using us to make up more complex arrangements. Instead, we can remain blissfully unaware if we like, or merely choose not to think about it. Our lives are simple; go to work, pay your taxes, watch TV.

In Germany during the 1930s, a young man worked on an assembly line in a baby carriage factory. His wife was going to have a baby, and he conceived the idea of stealing a part from each factory division. So, every couple of days, he stole a part. When he had all the parts at home, he assembled them. What he wound up with was not a baby carriage, but a machine gun - which illustrates the fact that in the beginning Hitler built his war machine using subterfuge. By the time the world became aware of his plans, it was too late. Even more ribald is the fact that Hitler was funded in part by New York and London banking interests. Indeed, there was a sphere of reality on top of the one our grandparents believed in and gave their lives for. The same thing is happening today. Well meaning, patriotic people are killing and dying for a cause which is a total fabrication. The same thing has always happened. There's a book called, "War Is A Racket" by Major General Smedley Butler. He testified to Congress in the 1930s and blew the whistle on the current President's grandfather, Prescott Bush, who was plotting a fascist coup of the US Government. This attempted coup was being bankrolled by a German industrialist named Fritz Thyssen, who happened to be one of Hitler's main financiers. How's that for an example of a genetic self-similar repetition of pattern?

Once you gain awareness of the bigger pattern of which your life comprises a necessary part, you must say goodbye to the old paradigm that was your interpretation of the world. Since that moment when I apprehended the truth about 9/11, I've never been comfortable with the idea that mass-murderers are running the show. The situation is not acceptable to me anymore. People are being subjugated to unspeakable horrors so a few egregious excuses for humanity can obtain obscene wealth and uncontrolled power, and everybody is supposed to look the other way because it's just too uncomfortable to talk about.

Look at just a few facts which we are supposed to be comfortable with:

- We must make war in Iraq and Afghanistan so we can bring them peace.
- We must strike Iran first with nuclear weapons of which we have thousands, because in a few years they might develop one. This despite the fact that the Director of National Intelligence publicly states, "We judge with high confidence that in fall 2003, Tehran halted its nuclear weapons program".
- The troops were lined up to attack Afghanistan months before the US government staged 9/11 and blamed it on the "terrorists".
- We must fight Al Qaeda, even though the CIA is inexorably tied to Al Qaeda.

- The money wired to Mohamed Atta didn't come from Al Qaeda, so ultimately it's not important who funded the "terrorists".
- The very fact that anybody speaks about "terrorists" on 9/11 when they have not produced one shred of evidence for the existence of these 19 men on that day.
- The financial entity that placed the "put options" before 9/11 is not connected to Al Qaeda, so it is not relevant to talk about it, even if it turns out to be connected to the CIA, who created Al Qaeda.
- On June 5, 2006 the FBI stated, "The reason why 9/11 is not mentioned on Osama bin Laden's Most Wanted page is because the FBI has no hard evidence connecting bin Laden to 9/11." As well as saying, "Bin Laden has not been formally charged in connection to 9/11."
- The missing 2.3 trillion dollars from the defense budget announced by Donald Rumsfeld the day before 9/11.
- The obvious controlled demolition of the 3 World Trade Center towers hit by only 2 planes.
- The Patriot Act & Military Commissions Act & Homegrown Terrorist Act & every other Act put forth by these traitors.
- The Department of Homeland Criminals.

"This earth, this beautiful earth, we have turned into a great prison. A few power-lusty people have reduced the whole of humanity into a mob. Man is allowed to exist only if he compromises with all kinds of nonsense" - osho

Patterns of Politics

Our entire culture is one big pattern, carefully created and manipulated according to a plan. For this plan to work we must all be quantifiable, predictable, and generally hypnotized into complacency. Those who fall outside the established norms will be deemed by "experts" to be mentally imbalanced. We see it already with the ridiculous laws being set up to criminalize dissent. There is no way we are ever going to see truth and justice from these people regarding 9/11. There may be more than enough compelling evidence to bring them to trial, but that would presuppose there was a sphere of justice in control. There is not. It's like asking the serial-killing pedophile to look after the girls dorm for the weekend. And so the mantra of the psychologically diseased gets repeated ad nauseam. War on terror. Al Qaeda. Bin Laden. Radical Muslims. On and on. That's all they have. The impetus of their conspiracy theory dissipates on a daily basis as the number of awakened individuals is increasing exponentially.

"Advertise, go on repeating to the public, and don't be bothered whether they believe or not -- that's not the point. Hitler says there is only one difference between a truth and a lie: the truth is a lie that has been repeated very often. And man can believe any lies. Man's gullibility is infinite. Man can believe in hell, man can believe in heaven, man can believe in angels, man can believe in devils, man can believe in anything! You just go on repeating." - osho

"See, in my line of work you got to keep repeating things over and over and over again for the truth to sink in, to kind of catapult the propaganda."
- George W. Bush

Ever notice how politicians can profess diametrically opposite viewpoints, yet still manage to convince themselves of the truth in their words. They are so genuinely concerned about your needs when they are running for office, but once elected they don't want to acknowledge your existence. It's human nature in this system. When I bring back the empty beer bottles to the liquor store "Returns" counter, the person takes a long time in the back before coming out to gruffly sneer at me without so much as a hello. Then he slaps down the change and brushes me off like I'm some kind of a bum. Now, in my mind, I can't help but think that just a few days ago it was "good day, Sir" and "thank you, Sir" when I was just a few feet away from this hell's corner starring "Shleppo the Wonderboy". There I was, standing in the line-up, apparently deserving of all the respectability in the world as I was waiting to shell out the bucks for some booze in this government-controlled liquor store. There should be just as much dignity to the process of returning the empties as there is in buying the full, shiny, new bottles. The point is, when people want your vote or your money, they are among your best friends, but when you want something from them, then it's "please fill out the form" or "press the pound key now".

How do we break free of these patterns? First we identify them, which means elevating our level of awareness and understanding, then we must have the courage to let them go.

Searching for Buddha

A monk set off on a long pilgrimage to find the Buddha. He devoted many years of his life to this search until he finally reached the land where the Buddha was said to live. While crossing the river to this country, the monk looked around as the boatman rowed. He noticed something floating towards them. As it drew closer, he realized that it was the corpse of a person. When it drifted so close that he could touch it, he suddenly recognized the dead body. It was his own! He lost control and shrieked at the sight of himself, dead and lifeless, floating along with the river's currents. Now he didn't need to get to the other shore, all that was him and his past floated away with the corpse. That moment was the beginning of his liberation. He started laughing because he had spent so much of his life searching for the Buddha without, and all the while Buddha was within. All he had to do was let go of that image he carried of himself. In another telling of this beautiful parable we have the monk arriving on the riverbank. Just as he is about to give up his search he sees a great teacher on the other side of the river. The monk yells over to the master, "Oh wise one, can you please tell me how to get to the other side of the river?" The teacher ponders for a few moments, looks up and down the river and yells back, "You are on the other side."

The patterns ingrained deep within us tell us there is only one way to be victorious in this world, and that is to fight our enemies and be better than everyone else. It has become an integral part of our survival mechanism. When you move inside your being, you naturally bring this same methodology, only here it will not work. Employing the old techniques of cunning, aggression and deceit will not help, for inside there is no one to trick but yourself. The greatest battles are fought internally. The worst hell is that which we impose on ourselves in our own mind through misinterpretation of the world. Instead of inculcating our young psyches with relativistic notions of who is best, we might try cultivating a mindset that seeks true understanding through awareness. That sense of mindfulness involves becoming a witness to your own life. Every thought and action has a ripple effect, and is therefore significant. It requires seeing yourself as not being separate from and in contention with your fellow human beings, but an integral part of all things.

Heaven and Hell

A huge, rough Samurai once went to see a little monk, hoping to acquire the secrets of the universe. "Monk," he said, in a voice accustomed to instant obedience, "teach me about heaven and hell."

The little monk looked up at the mighty warrior in silence. Then, after a moment, he said to the Samurai with utter disdain, "Teach YOU about heaven and hell? I couldn't teach you about anything. You're dirty. You smell. Your blade is rusty. You're a disgrace, an embarrassment to the Samurai class. Get out of my sight at once. I can't stand you!"

The Samurai was furious. He began to shake all over from the anger that raced through him. A red flush spread over his face; he was speechless with rage. Quickly, menacingly, he pulled out his sword and raised it above his head, preparing to slay the monk.

"That's hell." said the little monk quietly.

The Samurai was overwhelmed. Stunned. The compassion and surrender of this little man who had offered his life to give this teaching about hell! He slowly lowered his sword, filled with gratitude, and for reasons he could not explain his heart became suddenly peaceful.

"And that's heaven," said the monk softly. - Zen Proverb

Being a witness to your own life can elevate you to the perspective where you don't have to fight against the world. There is no need to prove anything, nobody to defeat. There is a higher consciousness which can be obtained by truly living within this moment, in no longer being a slave to our desires. We realize that our physical body withers with time, the ego fades, but rather than becoming some sad caricature of our former self, we can lift ourselves above what we once believed were the limits of our being. That realization requires bringing a mindfulness to each moment as if it is the only time we have left. It is. The past is gone. Tomorrow is never certain. But within that state of true conscious awareness, we have the eternal capacity to renew ourselves and throw off those patterns that are but chains upon our life. We don't need them. Rather than defining us in any life-affirming way, they only serve the designs of others and pose limitations on our true potential.

"Life repeats itself mindlessly - unless you become mindful, it will go on repeating like a wheel. That's why Buddhists call it the wheel of life and death, the wheel of time. It moves like a wheel: birth is followed by death, death is followed by birth; love is followed by hate, hate is followed by love; success is followed by failure, failure is followed by success. Just see! If you can watch just for a few days, you will see a pattern emerging, a wheel pattern. One day, a fine morning, you are feeling so good and so happy, and another day you are so dull, so dead that you start thinking of committing suicide. And just the other day you were so full of life, so blissful that you were feeling thankful to God, that you were in a mood of deep gratefulness, and today there is great complaint and you don't see the point why one should go on living.... And it goes on and on, but you don't see the pattern. Once you see the pattern, you can get out of it." - osho

Once we expose the fraudulence of 9/11, the entire globalist agenda will tumble like a house of cards, or in this case, a "twin tower".
Understanding this event within its greater context, we can pull the lynch-pin on the plans for the North American Union, and generate some much needed

Chaos In The New World Order

911 Truth is the single most important issue in all our lives right now - as Canadians, as North Americans, and as a citizens of this planet.
As long as we do not deal directly with this lie, we will continually be forced to play a part in all its subsequent crimes, and pay the ultimate price of our freedom because of willful ignorance or moral cowardice.
